Soviet official: Demands of U.S. may be sabotaging arms talks

MOSCOW (AP) — Veteran arms control negotiator Viktor Karpov said Sunday the United States may be trying to scuttle breakthroughs in medium-range missile talks with demands about short-range nuclear weapons and with other pro-

"There is increasing evidence that the United States does not really desire the elimination of medium-range missiles in Europe, that the 'zero option' was a bluff from the very outset," Karpov

Elimination of medium-range missiles in Europe, the so-called "zero option," was first proposed by President Reagan in his first term.

Progress toward an agreement was blocked by wrangling over U.S. deployments of mediumrange missiles and announcement of the U.S. 'Star Wars' research program. On Feb. 28, Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev offered to negotiate an agreement on eliminating U.S. and Soviet medium-range missiles from Europe without linkage to other issues, including Star Wars — the Strategic Defense Initiative for a space-based missile defense system.

The NATO allies welcomed the development, but expressed concern over Warsaw Pact superiin conventional arms and Soviet deployment of short-range nuclear missiles in East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Gorbachev said the issue of short-range mis-pact. The United States has no short-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

Karpov, a longtime Soviet disarmament negotiator, in January became head of the Foreign Ministry's newly created arms control office. His statements came in an interview published Sunday by Izvestia, the Soviet government newspa-

"That means that virtually all 108 Pershing 2s would remain in Europe, with the preservation of the installations to service them. Above all, the United States proposes not to destroy the cruise missiles deployed in Europe, but to move them out for deployment on ships and submarines."

In other words, Washington obviously would like to preserve all these medium-range weapons, but in another guise. If U.S. officials "wish to palm off on us a scrap of paper as a cover for the preservation of the U.S. nuclear missile potential in Europe, we will not agree to that," Karpov said.

Dog track owner to donate $1.3 million to Oral Roberts

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A millionaire dog track owner said Sunday he'll go on television to personally give $1.3 million to evangelist Oral Roberts, but said the gift has nothing to do with Roberts' claim that he might die if he didn't reach a fund-raising goal. Roberts said in March 1986 that God had given him a year to raise $8 million for scholarships so Oral Roberts University's medical-school graduates could afford to be missionaries in Third World countries.

Benefactor Jerry Collins is not a follower of Roberts and said he's donating the final $1.3 million to help the medical program, not because of the pioneer television evangelists' statements that God would "call him home" at the end of March if the fund-raising drive failed.

'The whole purpose of this is education and my interest in it," Collins told reporters Sunday before eating lunch with Roberts' son, Richard.
On Saturday, Collins said of Roberts, "To be sure, he doesn't have to commit hara-kiri now.

"I think he needs psychiatric treatment," Collins told the Orlando Sentinel. "He needs to relax . . . and get back on the main street." The check will be turned over Monday during Richard Roberts' live morning television broadcast from Tulsa, Okla., the headquarters of the Oral Roberts Foundation and home of Oral Roberts University. Richard Roberts, who flew here to meet Collins, said his father would be on the program.

In Tulsa, Roberts, 69, went up into his prayer tower on the university campus Sunday to fast and pray. He said last week that he would be spending much time in the tower, in the center of the 500-acre campus, until the end of the month.

Roberts told his followers on Jan. 4 that God had told him his life would end at the close of March if the money were not raised. Roberts, who has denied requests for interviews, indicated in February that he believed he could die in the tower.

"I'm going to be in and out of the prayer tower praying and fasting until victory comes or God calls me home," he said in a letter to follow-Asked what he thought of Roberts and his activities, Collins said, "It's not my way of promoting, but . . . Collins, 79, noted that he has donated millions to other educational projects. Several years ago, he bought the Clyde Beatty-Cole Brothers Circus and donated it to Florida State University. FSU sold the circus for $2 million. Recently, Collins helped New College in Sarasota pay for a $1 million library

Collins, who served four terms in the Florida House as a Democrat, owns the Sarasota and Sanford-Orlando kennel clubs, which handled $50 million in bets last year. Collins says he has cash assets of $14 million and is worth $75 million.

Roberts has opposed pari-mutuel betting, and just last week the Okla-homa legislature voted down a bill to legalize greyhound racing.

New PTL host appeals for money to pay loan

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The term debt and to raise cash. Falwell Rev. That storm began Thursday when Bakker admitted he had been blackmailed after a sexual encounter seven years ago. He turned over his 500,000-member PTL ministry to Falwell.

Dortch, who had been executive director of PTL under Bakker, was elevated to PTL president and host of its television ministry.

He told the congregation Sunday that it should be thankful for Fal-well's rescue of PTL. "I want to say on behalf of this church how deeply we appreciate Jerry Falwell reaching out to us," Dortch said. His comment was greeted with a standing ovation.

Falwell, who delivered his own sermon Sunday at his ministry's headquarters in Virginia, has acknowledged that he faces problems in operating PTL, which stands for "People That Love" and "Praise The Lord."

himself as Bakker's security guard, was quoted Saturday by the Los Angeles Times as saying Mrs. Bakker was at the Betty Ford Center. The Bakkers are secluded in a Spanish-style home protected by closed-circuit television and guards, the Times said. Dortch said the full story has yet to be told on Bakker's reasons for transferring the ministry to Falwell, but he told the congregation to be

South African guerrillas refuse to cease fire

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Archbishop Desmond Tutu said Sunday after his first formal talks with the African National Congress that he asked the guerrilla group to consider a cease-fire, but ANC leader Oliver Tambo refused.

Tutu spoke at an airport news conference on returning to Johannesburg from two days of talks with ANC leaders at their headquarters in Lusaka, Zambia.

The ANC, outlawed in South Africa, is the largest guerrilla organiza-tion fighting to overthrow this country's white-led government.

"I was asking them to review their own position, whether they ought to consider the renunciation of the armed struggle, in order to throw the ball back in the court of the South African government," said Tutu, the black leader of South Africa's Anglican Church and a top opponent of apartheid. But Tambo said in bidding fare-
