Nebraska's Iba named as new TCU coach

FORT WORTH (AP) — Moe Iba, 47, who won 60 per cent of his games and took Nebraska to the NCAA playoffs in five years with the Cornhuskers, was named Texas Christian University's 12th head basketball coach on Monday.

Iba, who was given a four-year contract at an estimated $50,000 per year, replaced the popular Jim Killingsworth, 63, who retired after an eight-year tenure at TCU which included an NCAA bid.

Iba said "My job will be to maintain and improve the program." "Coach Killingsworth did a great job of taking TCU to the top. This is a much better situation than taking a program that's down."

He added "My philosophy is close to Coach Killingsworth's. I try to adapt to by personnel. Just because I'm an Iba doesn't mean I like to play slow."

"You can't play that these days. You have to play a quicker tempo." TCU Chancellor William E. Tucker said Iba "shares our view that education comes first and that winning with integrity is possible."

"I believe we have found the right match between university and individual in Moe Iba."

Iba was the only person interviewed for the job by Athletic Director Frank Windegger.

"Jim Killingsworth said he would be the best coach in the Southwest Conference if we could get him," Windegger said. "I gave those remarks a lot of consideration."

Windegger called Coaches Dean Smith of North Carolina and the University of Texas-El Paso's Don Haskins for recommendations.

"He would be an asset to any program in the country," Smith told Windegger.

"Haskins thinks Moe hung the moon," Windegger said. "He said his youngsters always think the world of him."

Nebraska Athletic Director Bob Devaney told Windegger: "I think the world of him. He did a tremendous job of coaching at Nebraska."

Windegger added "I couldn't find anything bad about him. That always bothers you."

Iba said he will consider assistant Coach Charlie Fenske as a possible assistant on his staff.

"I'll look into that," Iba said.

TCU has five scholarships next year and Iba said, "We'll just have to see who is available. We're looking for quality athletes."

Iba asked Killingsworth what he needed for next year and Killingsworth told him "guards, forwards and centers. I guess that ought to cover it."

Iba said he considers the SWC, which placed three teams in the 1987 NCAA tournament, one of the best basketball leagues in the country.

"I was on teams that played against Coach Dave Bliss at SMU, Coach (Shelby) Metcalf at Texas A&M and Gerald Myers at Texas Tech and they were good," Iba said.

Iba, the son of 767-game winning legendary Oklahoma State Coach Hank Iba and a cousin of Baylor Coach Gene Iba, had a 106-71 record in five seasons at Nebraska before he resigned a year ago.

Asked how he would feel going against his cousin, Iba replied, "We're good friends, but it won't bother me."

Iba resigned immediately after

Nebraska lost to Western Kentucky 67-59 in the first round of the NCAA Tournament.

At the time, Athletic Director Devaney wanted to renew the contract but several members of the board of regents, who were concerned he had not won a Big 8 championship, disagreed.

Iba later signed on as an assistant coach at Drake. He had been considered for several coaching vacancies.

Iba played for his father at Iowa State. In 1962, he began coaching at Texas Western where he served as a freshman coach in 1963 and as a head coach in 1964 under Don Haskins.

He later served as an assistant coach at Nebraska eight years before returning to TCU as a head coach in Memphis State where he coached from 1976-77.

He returned to Nebraska as head coach Joe Cipriano, who came seriously ill. Iba became coach when Cipriano died in 1983.

Killingsworth retired last June 30th, after eight years at TCU. The Horned Frogs finished 57 to Notre Dame in the round of the NCAA playoffs.

Davis looks to future, puts past behind him

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — Houston first-baseman Glenn Davis has no time to think about the past, whether it be his troubled youth or a bitter contract battle with Astros General Manager Dick Wagner.

Davis isn't even taking time to think about his 1986 All-Star season in which he hit 31 homers, drove in 101 runs and finished second to Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt as the National League Most Valuable Player.

"I can't do my talking on the telephone or in negotiations; I've got to do it out there on the field," Davis said. "I told Mr. Wagner I won't let this stuff hamper me or bother me."

Davis, who earned $120,000 last season, thought he had done enough to merit a larger salary than Wagner offered.

But when it came to contract time, Davis found himself caught in a league-wide cost cutting phase. Davis said the only thing worse than the contract offer was Wagner's attitude.

Davis signed a contract that will pay him $215,000 plus another $25,000 if he makes the All-Star team. Davis sought $240,000.

"I went in and had a talk with Mr. Wagner and I told him if I'd caused any problems I'd like to ask for his forgiveness," Davis said.

Davis also says he's over the depression of an unhappy youth. There was a time, he said, "when I didn't care if I survived at all."

Now Davis has a sparkling new career, a family of his own, and a bright future.

"Probably talking about the whole situation last year was one of the best things that happened to me," Davis said.

Davis will start this season with one year, 145 days of major league experience. He still won't be eligible for salary arbitration as a 3-year veteran when his current contract expires.

"When that time comes, I'll handle it the way I think it should be handled," Davis said. "I'm not looking to hammer anybody or get back at anyone. That's a long time off."

"I don't even know if I'll be here tomorrow."

Davis blossomed into the long-awaited power hitter the Astros have been seeking in recent years.

In addition to his 31 homers, Davis led the team with 16 game winning hits and tied Mets catcher Gary Carter for the league lead.

Davis became only the third player in league history to get hit in a home run in his first playoff at bat.

"To me last year is history," he said. "I'm not concerned any more about last year."

Davis has eased tension in his own mind about his contract by taking a "whatever will be, will be" attitude.

"If I was supposed to make what I was asking for, I feel I'll make it up one way or another," he said. "I'll get what's due me, in time."

Davis isn't awed by the great expectations the Astros have of him.

"I try to think the opposite, that I'm not a star," Davis said. "I don't think of myself that way. I'm just a ball player and I realize this is hard work."

"If you thought about that kind of talk, I supposed it could be a problem. We are all human and have human tendencies."

Mavs' Aguirre to apologize for last Saturday's ejection

DALLAS (AP) — Mavericks forward Mark Aguirre, called a quitter and a coward by Dallas Coach Dick Motta after he was ejected from an NBA game, was given only the standard fine for an ejection.

Aguirre, who was thrown out before halftime in the Mavericks' 122-118 victory over Detroit on Saturday at Reunion Arena, said he would apologize to the team "at the earliest convenience."

Aguirre, who was starting for the Mavericks Monday at Philadelphia, was shoved by teammate Derek Harper in the earlier game. He was contrite later.

"I think an apology is needed," Aguirre said after the contest.

He had 11 points on 4-of-14 shooting at the time of his ejection and Dallas had a nine-point lead. Detroit closed to within 67-62 by halftime.

Aguirre was given the usual $250 fine for an ejection. One team member said Aguirre acted normally on the plane ride from Dallas, adding that Aguirre has not apologized to teammates.

Referee Jack Nies had to officiate the Detroit game by himself after referee Bill Saar was caught in a scuffle between Mavericks center James Donaldson and Pistons center Bill Laimbeer in the first minute of the game. Saar suffered a hyper-extended knee and couldn't continue.

Nies ejected Aguirre 20 seconds before halftime after Aguirre complained he was being roughed up without fouls being called.

Aguirre walked by the Mavericks' bench as Motta, kneeling at the sidelines, told the player to stay calm. Aguirre responded by arguing more. That resulted in two technicals and an automatic ejection.

Harper and Dallas guard Orlando Blackman had tried to strain Aguirre from arguing with Nies. But Aguirre refused to listen. After Aguirre's ejection, the forward walked past the table, Motta yelled, "What about the game?"

Yelled Aguirre, "I don't give a damn about the game."

He later denied making a statement but some of the Dallas players said they heard it.

Harper was so upset with Aguirre that as Aguirre left the court, Harper shoved him in the back and muttered, "Jerk!" A chorus of boos rang out through the sellout crowd of 17,907.

Aguirre headed up the ramp to the dressing room.

When the Mavericks went to the dressing room at halftime several players said Motta was enraged. He yelled at Aguirre, calling him, among other things, "coward" and "quitter."

Aguirre yelled back.

After the game, Aguirre said "I don't want to be kicked out of any game. I just thought I got on a couple of my shots. I just wanted to talk to the ref. I know Coach Motta was upset, and know I will apologize to him. The great thing is that we won the game without me on the floor."
