Woman accused of paying to have former lover beaten

HOUSTON (AP) — A Sweetwater woman went on trial Tuesday on federal charges stemming from an attack that was intended to leave her former lover sexually disabled.

Margaret Ila Covington, 36, formerly of Houston, is charged with two counts of using interstate facilities or travel to commit a violent crime to further an alleged extortion scheme. If convicted, she could get up to 10 years in prison and a $20,000 fine.

Covington — defended in the case by her husband, Sweetwater attorney Aubrey Roberts — is accused of wiring money to an Arizona man as payment for having Cage Wavell, her former lover, beaten and shot.

Prosecutors say the effort was intended to force Wavell to settle a paternity suit.

A November 1986 indictment identifies Terry Michael Noah of Phoenix as the man allegedly paid by Covington to sexually incapacitate Wavell, a Corpus Christi attorney.

The shooting — which left Wavell wounded in the arm, chest and leg but did not damage him sexually — occurred Nov. 2, 1981, when Noah and another man went to Wavell's office under the guise of seeking legal help.

The attack occurred four days after Wavell refused to sign an affidavit acknowledging he was the father of Covington's son.

Noah earlier pleaded guilty to attempted murder in the attack and was sentenced to five years in prison. The second man was identified by Noah as James Hunter, his half-brother.

Covington was convicted by a Corpus Christi jury on state charges of burglary with intent to commit aggravated assault. The charge stemmed from the shooting. The conviction, however, was thrown out by State District Judge Mike Westergren, who acquitted the woman four minutes later.

At that trial, Noah testified he gave a $500 down payment to Wavell and was given $1,500 and a Mexican passport to carry out the scheme. Hunter was granted immunity in the state case.

Roberts said Wavell later admitted he was the father of Covington's son and paid a lump sum settlement.

Covington is known for opening psychological profiles on persons and was a trial consultant for famed Houston attorney "Racehorse" Haynes from 1982.

Spokesman calls pipeline taking oil to Texas economically sound

ODESSA (AP) — A pipeline designed to pump oil from California to Texas is an economically sound project that soon will begin operation, a spokesman for the All American Pipeline Co. said.

The pipeline runs from Santa Barbara, Calif., to McCamey, about 50 miles south of Odessa. Oil will start flowing through the pipeline by next week, said Lou Resweber, director of communications for All American.

The company and its parent firm, Celeron Corp., believes the project is economically feasible, Resweber said, countering reports questioning the viability of the project.

Resweber said that Texas can deliver crude to Gulf of Mexico refineries, the East Coast and the Midwest. All American President Ronald L. Hinn was to speak at the American Petroleum Institute's annual pipeline conference in Dallas Tuesday.

Resweber said Hinn would refute reports that producers of cheap, heavy California crude haven't signed up to transport through the $1.2 billion All American Pipeline.

Environmental controversy has slowed development of California's offshore oil, eliminating the expected glut of heavy California crude, and inland producers are wary because of unresolved tariffs and low petroleum prices.

"We're going to ship 300,000 barrels a day," Resweber said. "I'm not as nervous as everyone else is about a long-term project."

The pipeline is 1,225 miles long, more than twice the size of the Alaska pipeline, Resweber said. Filling the line will take about 10 million barrels of oil.

Some of the oil will come from Celeron's reserves in the San Joaquin Valley. Resweber said a gas pipeline will deliver 75,000 to 100,000 barrels per day to the All American Pipeline.

Construction on the pipeline started in 1983. The line is to be completed by 1987. Some groups objected to the pipeline between McCamey and Houston because it would cross the Edwards Aquifer, which provides water to Austin.

Resweber said the Bureau of Land Management will decide in June whether the final leg of the pipeline can be built. But the line can function without it, he said.

"He was so excited I was an Aggie," Anderson said. "I was so thankful for the Aggie hospitality, even in Mexico. I couldn't believe it. It was the coolest thing in the world because I was completely desperate."

"I don't know if I would even be here right now. When he came up, it was such a relief. It just made my day."

Anderson said she had heard stories of Aggies helping Aggies.

"I've heard a lot of stories," she said. "I always thought it was really neat, but you really don't know how neat it is 'til it happens to you. It made me feel so much Aggie spirit."

He trusted me to get that money back to him. That meant a lot to me, that he trusted me like that."

Anderson already has repaid Crozier, along with sending him a thank-you note, but she hasn't talked to him yet.

Crozier could not be reached for comment.

Anderson says she doesn't plan to return to Mexico during future spring breaks.

"I never want to see Mexico again in my life," she said. "I'll just go to Hawaii or the Bahamas. Either that or I need to learn Spanish."

Graham Central Station Oct. 16, 1984, and placed 55 sticks of dynamite and a timing device in the club. The 4 a.m. blast caused $500,000 in damages but resulted in no injuries.

Dallis allegedly paid a total of $10,000 to have the club bombed, with Graham and Webb acting as intermediaries in the exchange of money and electronic blasting caps.

Simpson and Timothy Nash allegedly supplied William Nash with a case of dynamite.

At that time, Dallis owned the College Station nightclub Texaco South College Ave. Dallis owns ROXZ at the old Texaco station and Fajita Rita's at 510 Ave.

Dallis was arrested here and Graham was arrested in Houston the same day. Both are charged with the bombing.

The next day Nash was arrested in Lubbock and Simpson in Austin. Williams was arrested March 22 in Austin and is jailed in Memphis, Tenn.

Dallis and Graham were to be heard before a U.S. magistrate today to determine whether or not two will be released on bail.

Unlike so many other nations, the Peace Corps volunteers are not just a bunch of rugged one-eyed men. To volunteer for the Peace Corps is the toughest job you can get. It's also the toughest to secure.

"It was the toughest I've ever had," DeMoss said. "The object of the job is to help the people of the United States and to develop the economic and social conditions of foreign nations."

The application process is rigorous. The applicant must be a U.S. citizen, at least 18 years old, and have a high school diploma or GED. The applicant must also be in good health and have no criminal record.

The applicant must also be able to communicate in English. The applicant must be able to live in a rural area and have no dependents.
