3rd man arrested in sex, spy scandal involving Marines

WASHINGTON (AP) — A third Marine guard has been arrested in a burgeoning sex-and-spy scandal in the ranks of the Marine Corps' security guard force at the U.S. embassy in Moscow, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

Staff Sgt. Robert Stanley Stufflebeam, 24, of Bloomington, Ill., was taken into custody on suspicion of failing to report contacts with Soviet women while working in Moscow from May 1985 to May 1986. He was arrested Sunday at Camp Pendleton, Calif.

"Specifically, he is suspected of having associations with Soviet women on several occasions," Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims said.

Sims stressed that Stufflebeam had not been accused of espionage, as have two other former Moscow embassy guards.

Stufflebeam had commanded the two, Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree, 25, and Cpl. Arnold Bracy, 21.

The Marines announced Monday that all 28 guards now at the embassy will be replaced in April, but it said the others are not suspected of wrongdoing.

The Marine Corps has charged that Lonetree escorted Soviet agents inside the embassy, shutting off security alarms that were tripped by the Russians, while Bracy stood guard. Lonetree also is accused of providing pictures and names of CIA agents on the embassy staff.

"The damage was probably enormous," one source, speaking anonymously, has said.

Although the Marines have refrained from making the charge publicly, Pentagon sources said both Lonetree and Bracy became involved sexually with Soviet women who worked on the embassy's staff.

Lonetree, in papers made public by his lawyer, William Kunstler, said that as an American Indian, "I guess some of my actions were based on hatred for prejudices... because of what the white man did to the Indian."

A Pentagon source, who agreed to discuss the newest development if not identified, said Stufflebeam had been arrested as a result of an effort "to pin down every contact that any guard could have had with a Soviet national."

The source said military investigators had been "appalled" to learn of the extent to which some of the guards fraternized with Soviet citizens.

Such fraternization is barred by military regulations governing guards assigned to communist countries.

Highway plan veto voted down by House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted 350-73 Tuesday to override President Reagan's veto of an $88 billion highway and mass-transit bill, sending the measure to the Senate for the final round of a bruising political struggle.

The margin was 68 votes more than the two-thirds needed to override the president's action on the bill, which couples more than 100 road projects made to order for individual lawmakers with a provision permitting the states to raise the speed limit to 65 miles per hour on most stretches of interstate highway.

Soon after the House voted, the Senate began debating the override motion.

The Senate debated the veto for more than an hour Tuesday but postponed a vote until today.

In the House, 248 Democrats and 102 Republicans — including GOP Leader Bob Michel of Illinois — cast their votes to override the veto.

Michel noted the presence of funds in the bill to complete a highway widening project in his district, and said he was making a "very difficult, agonizing decision for the first time in the Reagan presidency."

Freshman GOP Rep. Arthur Ravenel Jr. of South Carolina said, "You can bet your spring petunias this Congress will override the veto. President Reagan, he ain't going to be running in 1988, but I am."

The White House made little discernible effort to prevail in the House, and concentrated efforts in the Senate in what has become a test of Reagan's political standing.

Authorities say couple used fake contest to steal babies

ATHENS, Ala. (AP) — A Washington state couple used a "Beautiful Baby Contest" as part of a 1980 scheme in which at least two new mothers in Texas and Alabama were killed and their babies abducted for sale, according to authorities still piecing the cases together.

Harold Schut and Jackie Sue Schut, who are awaiting trial on murder charges in a 1980 baby abduction and slaying in Athens, may have been involved in six similar cases, according to a Texas investigator.

Schut, who recently attempted to escape from the Limestone County Jail in north Alabama, is under a capital murder indictment in the killing of Geneva Clemons, 27, and the abduction of her infant son in Athens on Jan. 21, 1980. Last week

Schut was indicted in Houston on a kidnapping charge in an infant abduction and the killing of the baby's mother, Cheryl Ann Jones, 20, on March 8, 1980.

Chuck Rosenthal, an assistant district attorney handling the case in Houston, told the Athens News Courier in a story published Tuesday that the Schuts may have been involved in "at least six other such cases."

"I personally believe very strongly there are other instances of similar acts," he said.

He declined to elaborate. Mrs. Schut, 34, is scheduled to stand trial May 4 on a murder charge in the slaying of Clemons, who was shot to death after Schut allegedly approached her about taking pictures of her 15-day-old baby for a magazine.

Salaries

ulty salaries at A&M, saying that some faculty members do not see their future in Texas and have left for better opportunities.

"We cannot expect to attract and retain the best academic talent without competitive salaries," he said.

Adkisson said he is urging the Texas Legislature to increase funding for faculty salaries.

"In recent legislative testimony before the Budget and Oversight Subcommittee of the House Higher Education Committee and before the Senate Finance Committee," Adkisson said, "I stated that increasing faculty salaries — restoring their competitiveness — is my No. 1 priority."

On Tuesday, Adkisson said he had not yet seen the Coordinating Board's report, but he is continuing his efforts in the Legislature to improve faculty salary funding.

Brown said some of the Coordinating Board's recommendations to the Legislature now are being considered in House and Senate committees. One recommendation would bring faculty salaries back into step with the national average and eventually with the averages of the 10 most populous states with which A&M competes.

"They're working on versions of appropriations bills in both the House and in the Senate," Brown said. "One version includes funds to bring higher education (appropriations) back up to 1985 levels, plus enough to adjust for inflation."
