Testing

 The current effect a drug is having on the athlete tested."
 He said athletes are forced to urinate in the full view of what the NCAA calls a "urinator monitor validator." He said this is done to make sure athletes don't cheat by using someone else's specimen.
 He also said the traces of the drugs the athletes are being tested for may be detectable in the body for days, weeks, even months after their use. He added that football players participating in this year's bowl games were tested a full one or two weeks before the games were played.
 Toner responded by saying that the NCAA is interested in all performance-enhancing drugs taken in preparation for and used during an athletic event. He said this would include the use of anabolic steroids.

 Toner said that the United States has cut production of steroids from seven or eight different types down to two or three different types while the world has increased its varieties from about 30 types to about 70 or 80 types.
 Laseter said although the many varieties are a little harder to identify, today's urine-testing equipment is complex and accurate enough to do so.
 Chen said that drug testing is a violation of an athlete's or any individual's constitutional rights.
 He said that because people are tested without having proved probable cause of drug use, drug testing presumes that everyone is guilty until proven innocent.

 But Toner maintains that participation in NCAA athletic events is voluntary.
 Toner said it is the NCAA's responsibility to regulate the collegiate athletics of its member schools.
 Chen said that the NCAA needs to invest more resources in drug education and drug awareness.
 "A recent study showed that less than 60 percent of collegiate athletes had participated in any type of drug awareness class," he said.
 Toner, however, said the NCAA considers drug testing to be part of drug education and drug awareness.

Court to force Texaco to post $11 billion bond

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a decision that could bankrupt Texaco Inc., ruled on Monday an order that the giant oil corporation post a $11 billion bond in its court case with Pennzoil Co.

The justices voted, 9-0, to throw out a federal judge's ruling that Texaco need not post the $11 billion in security while the case is pending in the courts.

Assault

 have multiple sex partners, the victim may have been exposed to any number of sexually transmitted diseases, she says.
 Aside from this, Dr. Claude Goswick, director of the A.P. Beutel Health Center, says the victim may be physically injured.
 "At the hospital, the victim will have a physical exam," Goswick says. "This will allow for the treatment of any scratches or injuries she may have gotten. A vaginal exam is necessary to check for any internal injuries and the presence of semen."

"If a student is raped, we try to have a female counselor present at the hospital. These women (victims) are pretty upset at that time. An emotional exam helps determine if they need any medication to help them calm down."
 Victims attacked by people they know will suffer as much or more than the individual attacked by a stranger, Castoria says.
 Date (or acquaintance) rape results from the same motivation as rape by a stranger. It is an expression of anger, power, dominance and control — not sexual frustration.

With a date-rape situation, Castoria says, the two parties may have the same friends. There is a lot of pressure to "give Joe" a break.
 "There is a lot of pressure from all sides," she says. "It's understandable, but unfortunate."
 Sexual assault victims are often afflicted with another problem, that of finances.
 Castoria says some victims have to spend years in therapy — a considerable financial burden.
 The Texas Legislature approved the Violent Crime Victim Compensasation program to financially aid victims of violent crime, such as rape. Victims may be eligible for benefits if they are Texas residents and were assaulted on or after Jan. 1, 1980.

 These benefits include compensation for loss of earnings and reasonable medical, drug, counseling and rehabilitation expenses.
 A single, brief attack can dramatically alter an individual's life, Castoria says, and unfortunately most victims don't feel they've done anything wrong — sex is sex. They never realize the terror they've caused.
