CS Jazz Festival attracts cheering crowd of 2,000

Joe Warner of Don Pope and Friends plays a long solo on the keyboards at the jazz festival Saturday.

By Cindy Bomba
Reporter

The College Station fourth annual Jazz Festival had a slow start Saturday in Central Park but the crowd soon started cheering and clapping for more, said Sheila Mason, program director for the College Station Parks Department.

About 2,000 people paid to attend this year's festival, Mason said.

The festival, which in previous years has been free and allowed people to bring in food and drinks, charged an admission this year and didn't allow outside refreshments to be brought in.

"There were more than 2,000 people here," Mason said. "Some people sat outside the festival grounds — to protest, I suppose. That's all right — we all had a great time."

Don Pope and Friends, who participated in the first and third festivals, said this was the best festival yet.

"This year offered a variety of bands," Pope said. "It gave us an opportunity to try a variety of styles."

Texaco action won't cut jobs in Port Arthur

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Texaco Inc.'s filing for Chapter 11 protection produced feelings of uncertainty Sunday in Port Arthur, a city with a sprawling Texaco refinery that neighbors the Texaco Chemical Plant in Port Neches.

Work will continue as normal at the local plants, two of the Texaco holding company's subsidiaries unaffected by the bankruptcy filing.

Mayor Malcolm Clark expressed both disappointment and hope over the filing.

"It will have no effect on the refinery or marketing divisions here," Clark said. "They apparently felt this was the best way to recoup and work out an arrangement ... (with) Pennzoil."

Pennzoil won a $11 billion judgment in state civil court for Texaco's interference in a proposed merger between Getty and Pennzoil. An $11 billion bond required for Texaco to appeal the award in state court led to the Chapter 11 filing for protection from creditors Sunday.

Jerry Little, president of Pipefitters Local 195, was pleased with the filing.

"It couldn't happen to a nicer bunch of old boys," Little said. "I'm a union man, and I say good riddance to them. They kicked us out and hired a bunch of rat laborers."

Pope's band played some old-style jazz and offered a few gospel songs played with a jazz flavor.

"This year offered a variety of bands. It gave us an opportunity to try a variety of styles."
— Don Pope, band leader and festival participant

Pope tried something different this year. He brought vocalist Karen Ellis and violinist Gene Adam to perform with the band.

Ellis sang several songs with the band and performed two duets with Brazos McDonald.

"This is the kind of variety you need," Pope said. "People can only sit so long and listen to bands without some type of interaction."

Totny Jackson sang a variety of styles, including jazz, gospel and reggae. She was the third act to perform this year.

Mauro to speak in agriculture program

Texas Land Commissioner Gary Mauro will participate in a program titled "The Economic Impact of Texas Agriculture" 3 p.m. Tuesday in 601 Rudder. The program is hosted by MSC Great Issues.

Mauro, a 1970 marketing graduate of Texas A&M, is currently serving his second term as land commissioner and is widely considered a future candidate for the governor's office. A Great Issues spokesman said Mauro is likely to speak on government agricultural subsidies and policies.

Featured speakers also will include David G. Eller, owner and chairman of Grenada Corp. of Houston — a high-tech agricultural firm. Grenada has pioneered

Liberal speakers set for awareness day

Speakers representing eight liberal political organizations will have their say Tuesday as part of the MSC Political Forum's "Political Awareness Day."

The schedule for the speeches is as follows:
• 11 a.m. — American Atheists.
• 11:30 a.m. — Texas Trial Lawyers Association.
• Noon — Central America Peace Initiative.

"It gets bigger and better each year," Jackson said. "The whole thing was better this year."

Jackson enjoys singing at the festival because it is the only time she gets a chance to perform in the MSC and College Station, she said.

"I really would have liked to do a later billing," Jackson said. "I noticed four of my regulars in the crowd. My following is a later crowd and my turnout could have been much better."

Mason said the largest crowd during the North Texas State University One O'Clock Lab Band performance.

"That has been the case every year we've had it," she said.

Pope said, "North Texas State is the best big band in the country. None of the others even come close and you can quote me on that."

Next year's festival will have a larger budget and more vocalists, said.

"I was very pleased with the festival this year, and I hope the improvements continue," Mason said.

Advanced livestock breeding techniques such as embryo freezing and transplants.

Eller, a 1959 graduate of A&M and chairman of the A&M Board of Regents, will represent the corporate farming sector of Texas agriculture.

The third panelist is Dr. Stephen H. Murdock, A&M professor of sociology, who will speak on the condition of the small farmer in Texas. Murdock, who received his Ph.D. from the University of Kentucky in 1972, has been teaching at A&M since 1977 and currently heads the department of rural sociology.

The program moderator will be Dr. Daniel I. Padberg, head of the A&M department of agricultural economics.

- 12:30 p.m. — National Organization for Women.
- 1:00 p.m. — Communist Party of Texas.
- 1:30 p.m. — Students Against Apartheid.
- 2:00 p.m. — Socialist Workers Party.
- 2:30 p.m. — Student American Ethnic Coalition.

Weather permitting, all speeches will be conducted in the MSC Lounge and at Rudder Fountain.
