Clements plans no-new-taxes tour for 17 Texas cities

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements on Thursday announced a no-new-taxes tour in which he will bring his austerity message to 17 cities in the coming weeks.

The announcement came several hours after the House Appropriations Committee wrapped up a marathon session that ended at 3 a.m. and produced tentative committee approval of a 1988-89 state budget that would be about $38.4 billion.

Clements has vowed to veto any budget that tops $36.9 billion.

The Senate on Wednesday approved a $39.9 billion spending plan. The House probably will work on its budget bill during the week of April 26, Speaker Gib Lewis said.

A House-Senate conference committee then would work out differences between the two bills. The whole effort could prove moot if it produces a spending package above Clements' limit.

"The people of Texas do not want higher taxes, period," Clements said. "So I'm going out on the road, and I'm going to preach the gospel that we're going to live within our means and there are not going to be any new taxes." Clements supports the continuation of the temporary sales and motor fuels tax increases now in effect.

That plan, which would raise $2.9 billion in 1988-89, has won House approval. The Senate has not acted.

Lewis said no one wants to raise taxes, but it might become necessary. "There's nothing inevitable," he said. "But certainly if we are going to maintain current services, and sometimes below current services, . . . I don't see any way we can get through here without some type of revenue enhancement or tax increase."

He said efforts would be made to cut the spending bill endorsed by the appropriations panel.

House Appropriations Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said the bottom line of his committee's bill probably would hold up on the floor "unless someone made a convincing argument to cut public education in a big, dramatic way."

In approving its bill, Rudd's committee rejected Clements' call for cuts in vocational education, teacher career ladder programs and kindergarten programs.

The governor remains confident his proposals are not dead.

"Everybody's having a little tussle right now with the numbers, and they probably need to go home and talk to some of their constituents and meet with some of the service clubs and chambers of commerce and discuss with them a $3 million or $4 million or $5 million dollar tax increase and see how their home folks like that," Clements said.

He said that is exactly what he will be talking about on the tour, which begins with stops in Laredo and Harlingen on Monday and College Station and Waco on Tuesday.
