

Perhaps You Know This Young Lady: She has an extrovert's personality. She might as well carry a soapbox with her at all times, because she sure has one heck of an opinion about just about everything. But she's got charisma, and she's not exactly homogenized milk. One more thing: if she doesn't live and breathe for Sports, at least she has a working knowledge of it. If you know this terrific gal, we may have an exciting opportunity for her! Students can try shark, lamb dishes in 'Taste of Texas'

By Chris Caywood-Brennan Reporter

Tired of eating the same cafeteria food every day? Well, get ready to try some not-so-monotonous foods in the campus dining rooms starting today and running through Friday.

"A Taste of Texas" is a concept designed to introduce students to unusual yet nutritious foods available in Texas, says Joseph Biermann, dining center manager and chairman of the program.

"We're trying to feature items native to Texas," Biermann says. Organized in cooperation with and sponsored by the Texas Department of Agriculture, the Texas food week was tried at the University of Texas a year ago and was such a success that Lloyd Smith, assistant director of the Texas A&M Department of Food Services, thought it would be a good idea to try it here.

Biermann says samples of different foods will be featured each day of the week in the campus dining facilities. All of the featured foods are nutritious, native to Texas and economical, he says.

The menu, listed in order of appearance, is:
 • Monday — crawfish, a freshwater crustacean high in protein and low in fat.

• Tuesday — shark meat, which is boneless and a good source of protein and vitamin A.

• Wednesday — cottage cheese, the simplest form of fresh cheese, which is high in protein, vitamins and minerals.

• Thursday — lamb, which is very tender and is a good source of protein, zinc, iron and B-vitamins.

• Friday — spinach, a vegetable that may be eaten cooked or raw and provides calcium, vitamin A, vitamin C and iron.

The program's purpose is to introduce students to a variety of foods, Biermann says, while breaking the monotony of cafeteria food. The foods used in the program are recommended by the Texas Department of Agriculture and are included in the dining facility board plan, he says.

In addition to the food samples, he says, there will be daily drawings for "A Taste of Texas" caps and aprons.

If "A Taste of Texas" is successful, Biermann says, the program will be implemented again next year, with the addition of other food items.

"We hope it will become an annual thing," he says. "It probably will if it's as successful as the one at the University of Texas."

Congress to probe conduct of Dallas police to minorities

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Police Department will be the target of scrutiny this week when a congressional probe begins into allegations of police misconduct in the minority community.

The House Subcommittee on Criminal Justice, chaired by U.S. Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., expects to call 25 witnesses at the hearings set for Friday and Saturday.

The public hearings were requested by local black elected officials and community leaders who protested the fatal police shooting last October of a 70-year-old black woman who had reported a burglary. The officer was fired one day after a grand jury cleared him in the case.

The House panel will not issue rulings on any shooting cases nor call witnesses or evidence. Panel spokesmen said all testimony will be voluntary.

"Basically there is a feeling of distrust in the minority community toward the police," said U.S. Rep. Martin Frost of Dallas, who, with fellow Dallas Rep. John Bryant, relayed the request for a hearing to Conyers.

Price and other minority leaders hope the congressional probe will uphold their claim that police insensitivity to minorities is linked to the disproportionate number of minority victims.
