Tip leads campus police to turf stolen from Kyle Field

By Carolyn Garcia
 Staff Writer

An anonymous tip given to University Police has led officers to a batch of old AstroTurf, stolen from Kyle Field last week.

Police on Friday recovered the artificial turf, along with two road signs, out of three rooms in Walton Hall's K ramp.

The two students willingly gave up the property and volunteered to make restitution to the Athletic Department, said Bob Wiatt, director of security and University police. The department has chosen not to press criminal charges, he said.

"The young men's attitude was very cooperative," Wiatt said. "They didn't think the stuff was worth anything," he said. "They just wanted a little memento from Kyle Field."

The matter has, however, been turned over to student affairs.

The tip was given to police following late-night and early-morning arrests of five students who were caught stealing artificial turf from Kyle Field by a stakeout unit of the University Police, Wiatt said.

The students were caught in two separate incidents between 11:45 p.m. Thursday and 12:50 a.m. Friday. They were stealing squares of old AstroTurf from Kyle Field where a new surface is being put in, he said.

These students also were released without charges being filed because the Athletic Department did not plan to press criminal charges.

Wiatt said the police received an anonymous tip Friday morning that several rooms in Walton Hall had some artificial turf in them.

Kyle Field's resurfacing is expected to be finished by August 1, says Billy Pickard, coordinator of training, equipment and facilities.

Upon arriving at the residence hall, he said, police found the stolen artificial turf along with the street signs.

"There were several street signs," he said. "There was one

"Slick when wet" and one "Leaving Houston city limits" sign." Wiatt said the confiscated artificial turf, which had been kept in the police property room, was turned over to the Athletic Department Tuesday.

Senate committee endorses bill to lower bond Texaco must pay

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation to lower the bond Texaco Inc. must post in its multibillion-dollar battle with Pennzoil was endorsed by a Senate committee Tuesday after Texaco's chairman said it was his company's only chance to promptly escape bankruptcy proceedings.

Texaco chairman Alfred C. DeCrane Jr. said the bill would reduce to a maximum of $1 billion the bond his company must post to appeal its $11 billion loss to Pennzoil. Current law sets that appeal bond at the size of the judgment, or about $11 billion in this case, he said.

Pennzoil lawyer Joe Jamail said the bill won't help Texaco now, because the company voluntarily sought protection from creditors on April 12 through bankruptcy laws.

Jamail said the bond was large "because it's the biggest theft in the history of the world."

Jamail accused Texaco of stealing more than a billion barrels of oil from Pennzoil.

In November 1985, a Houston court awarded Pennzoil $10.5 billion in damages after deciding that Texaco improperly interfered in Pen-nzoil's agreement to acquire a large stake in Getty Oil Co.

An appeals court subsequently reduced that decision by $2 billion, but it let the judgment stand.

Under current state law, a defendant who loses a court judgment must post a bond in the full amount of the judgment, plus interest, when he appeals.

The bill being considered would change the law to allow a judge to determine what would be adequate security during an appeal, and would set a maximum limit of $1 billion on such bonds.

Senator: Handgun bill won't lead to gunfights in street

AUSTIN (AP) — A state senator sponsoring a proposal to license Texans to carry handguns assured his colleagues Tuesday the legislation would not result in streets in the state deteriorating into another Dodge City.

"I believe the people of Texas want the opportunity to protect themselves, their businesses and their families from the criminals who already carry guns and will continue to carry guns if this law is passed," said Sen. Ken Armbrister, D-Port Arthur, a former police captain.

Armbrister also said law enforcement officers would be "speaking against the bill."

Armbrister said the burden of proof to show moral character and the ability to properly use a handgun would be placed on the individual seeking a license.

To be eligible, a person would have to be 21 years of age and a resident of Texas for six months. He also would have to be of sound mind and not an illegal alien or habitual drunkard.
