U.S. expanding duties of Navy in Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy, in an unexpected first step toward taking on expanded duties in the Persian Gulf, escorted a Kuwaiti merchant ship carrying U.S. arms to Bahrain on Monday, the Pentagon disclosed Tuesday night.

The Kuwaiti cargo ship was carrying American-made M-60 tanks that had been sold to Bahrain by the United States. The ship completed its journey Monday night "without incident," the Pentagon said.

The Defense Department, in a statement released in response to press queries, said it decided to offer escort protection to the vessel because "it is important that the United States remain a reliable supplier of defense items to friendly countries."

"On a case-by-case basis, given the situation in the Persian Gulf, we will escort (such) shipments to friendly, non-belligerent countries," the statement added.

The disclosure came as a surprise because the Reagan administration had previously announced plans only to provide escort protection to Kuwaiti oil tankers that changed their registry to the U.S. flag. That protection is expected to begin sometime early next month, according to Pentagon sources.

The administration had said nothing before Tuesday about using U.S. warships to keep an eye on foreign vessels if they were carrying American-made arms.

Although President Reagan and other top officials have vowed to proceed with the plan to allow Kuwaiti tankers to change their registry, the move has drawn criticism in Capitol Hill in the wake of the May 17 attack on the frigate USS Stark.

The Stark was heavily damaged in an Iraqi air attack that left 37 sailors dead. Both the United States and Iraq have described that attack as inadvertent.

The Stark was part of the Navy's Mideast Task Force, which normally consists of six or seven small warships that patrol the Persian Gulf to keep an eye on U.S. vessels.

Although the attack on the Stark was the first on an American ship, the Navy's work in the gulf has come increasingly dangerous because Iran and Iraq — which have been fighting each other for seven years — have stepped up attacks on commercial shipping and bid to cripple each other's economies.

U.S. ceremony honors sailors killed in attack by Iraq on USS Stark

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP) — The remains of 36 of the men killed in a "strike of madness" on the USS Stark arrived Tuesday in the United States to a solemn ceremony attended by grieving relatives and fellow sailors.

With a huge American flag as a backdrop, members of a Navy honor guard stood at attention behind each flag-draped coffin, set on cinder blocks in a hangar known as Memorial Hall, while the Navy Band played the "Navy Hymn" and the national anthem.

Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost, chief of naval operations, told relatives and others the deaths "are an ache in our hearts."

Thirty-seven sailors were killed in a May 17 Iraqi missile attack in the Persian Gulf. One sailor is missing and presumed dead.

Of the 36 bodies returned to the base, the 35 that will be prepared here for burial were honored in the ceremony.

The remains of another sailor, whose name was not released in a request of the family, was at home about 90 minutes before 2:30 p.m. ceremony.

Trost called the attack a "madness."

"Today, with heavy hearts, we mourn their tragic loss," he said.

"We find it hard to understand why fate has singled them out," Trost said. "But we do know they were doing a tough job. They died in the service of our country, believing in the end wonderful ideals."

Relatives, who were often with grief when the coffins were loaded earlier on a C-141 jet, shed tears and consoles. As a other during the brief ceremony, while state and local officials looked on.

Charles C. Carson, base chaplain, said all of the remains were shipped to their hometowns by the end of the week. The first expected to leave Wednesday.

Korean leader fires 8 to halt protest after student's death

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan fired his prime minister and seven other Cabinet members Tuesday in an attempt to quiet outrage over the death of a student under police questioning. Critics demanded Chun's resignation.

Thousands of students chanting "Down with the government that uses torture and murder!" staged anti-government protests, and some fought riot police.

Most observers agree that the dismissals will not satisfy most people, but they don't believe that the former general's government will lose its grip or that much will change.

Those dismissed with Prime Minister Lho Shin-yong included the heads of the national intelligence agency and the Home Affairs Ministry, which is in charge of police.

Lee Yong-chang, the national police chief, submitted his resignation, but whether it was accepted was not immediately known. Lee took over after a previous chief was forced out of office soon after the torture death was revealed.

The government contends the Jan. 14 death of dissident student Park Chung-chol was an isolated incident. It cites dismissals of officials and arrests of police officers as evidence of its refusal to condone such conduct. To many South Koreans, the dead student has become a symbol of what ails their country after years of authoritarian rule.

A government spokesman said the dismissals announced Tuesday were a result of Chun's "decision to put an end to public doubts triggered by recent developments and to achieve... stability and unity."

Official sources said that all 26 Cabinet members were instructed to submit resignations because of the torture death and other embarrassing events, and that Chun accepted eight as bearing "political and moral responsibility."

Public anger over Park's death in custody increased after a group of Roman Catholic priests revealed last week that more police officers were involved then was admitted. Police commanders have been questioned about a possible cover-up.

Little significance is given Chun's reorganization. The minister and Cabinet have power, and the new appointees regarded as Chun loyalists, like predecessors.

Lee Han-key, the new prime minister, is an obscure law professor. Most of the new ministers are relatively unknown.

Opposition groups dismissed shakeup as a token and contend that nothing short of Chun's resignation will satisfy the nation.

The Reunification Democratic Party, the main opposition group, claimed the government still concealing what happened in the torture death. Party spokesman Tae-ryong said: "The present game must step down."

A dispatch from the Korean agency Yonhap said 7,000 students took part in protests at 23 universities and colleges around the country.

Japanese paper: Data on U.S. aircraft may be part of spy package

TOKYO (AP) — Technical data on a new Boeing AWACS radar plane may have been part of the information four alleged Japanese spies sold the Soviet Union, the newspaper Yomiuri said Monday.

Police found copies of a manual for maintaining, inspecting and flying the plane in the home of Masateru Tachibana, 59, a military writer and former employee of a U.S. air base, the newspaper reported. Tachibana and three other men were arrested May 19 on suspicion of spying for the Soviet Union and China.

Yomiuri publishes papers in both Japanese and English, and the two versions gave different types of radar planes as the alleged target of espionage.

The Japanese version said the plane is a new Boeing E3C, a remodeled version of the E3A Airborne Warning and Control Systems craft, which is based on the Boeing 707.

But the English version called it a Boeing E3C Hawkeye. Boeing makes no Hawkeye, but Grumman does. The Grumman Hawkeye, which has the U.S. Navy designations E-2A, E-2B or E-2C, also is an early warning aircraft with a large radar pod mounted on its back similar to the Boeing AWACS craft.

Yomiuri officials said later the English version was wrong and the plane was a Boeing of the Sentry series.

Japanese officials said they would not confirm or deny the Yomiuri reports and U.S. military offices were closed Monday for Memorial Day.

Earlier unconfirmed reports said the four men suspected of espionage sold information on the U.S. F-16 fighter to the Soviets.

Hiroimi Date, 62, a counselor at the private China Technical Center, was arrested after trying to pass documents to V.B. Aksenov of the Soviet trade office at a western Tokyo park, police reported.

Authorities said Date and other members of the group sold U.S. military documents to Aksenov and Igor A. Solokov, a first secretary at the Soviet Embassy, for 100 million yen ($714,286), the paper reported.

Hiroshi Osumi, 65, an employee in the technical library of the U.S. Yokota Air Base in western Tokyo, was picked up for allegedly stealing technical documents, according to the newspaper. It said Tachibana and Sadao Gotoh, 60-year-old president of Sanko Ltd., a trading company doing business with China, were arrested on charges of buying stolen goods.

One-day gain by market hits as third largest

NEW YORK (AP) — The Jones industrial average made its third largest one-day gain today, as investors shook off the recent concern about inflation.

The closely watched index leaped 54.74 points to 2,297.75. The advance was the biggest since April 21, when the blue-chip rometer rose 66.47 points to 2,337.07.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 4-to-1 on New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said stock prices boosted through the trading session by Tuesday's advance in bond prices and the dollar's rise and by a decline in commodity prices. A sharp rise in commodity prices had sparked concern that inflation could build momentum, depressing share prices.

The Commerce Department report that Americans' income tax rates plunged 2.4 percent in April, the steepest monthly decline in 12 years, did not dampen Wall Street's bullish sentiment. The big drop in after-tax income was blamed on higher-than-expected tax payments this year.

Reports from the seven domestic automakers that new sales declined in mid-May didn't slow the market's advance.
