POLICY AND RULES

The Student Publications Coordinator reserves the right to refuse publication of any advertisement for The Battalion.

The Battalion will not print news stories, pictures, or free notices as part of any advertising arrangement. Requested position is given any ad whenever possible, but never is guaranteed or sold.

The Battalion will not reduce charges for simple typographical errors or misprints. If an error of ours distorts an advertising message, consideration, if requested within one business day of first publication, will be given to reduction of charges for space involving only the item affected.

All political ads including those from campus organizations, must be labeled as such and must carry identification of sponsor or sponsoring organization. Students for all political ads, or for ads for closing out or going out of business sales, MUST BE PAID IN ADVANCE, even for regular credit customers.

All advertising which does not otherwise contain identification will be required to include a line identifying buyer of the space. Ads designed to look like news articles will not be permitted, and if there is any question, a line "Paid Advertisement" must appear at ad extremities.

Year sheets will be mailed on request. Proofs will be furnished on request for any ad of 30 column inches or more, but only if ad copy is submitted at least four days prior to publication.

All ads 19 inches or deeper in regular paper, or 11 inches or deeper in tabloids, will be charged for full page depth.

All ads must be at least as many inches deep as they are columns wide.

MAXIMUM LEGAL INTEREST WILL BE CHARGED ON ALL PAST DUE ADVERTISING BILLS. Bill is past due when payment has not been received in Student Publications office by close of last business day of calendar month in which bill is received.

FAA strengthens rules to battle heavy traffic

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration, pressed by critics to do something about mounting concern over air safety, tightened procedures Thursday to slow down the air traffic flow into some of the country's busiest airspace.

The new air traffic restrictions are expected to ease pressure on controllers during busy parts of the day, agency officials said.

However, the officials acknowledged that the move also is likely to add to the mounting flight delay problem.

More planes are expected to be held on the ground or spread farther apart in flight, officials said.

This announcement came as officials were describing the new restrictions.

The FAA said it already has implemented the tighter controls on the flow of traffic into 32 airspace "sectors" that feed the busy airports at Chicago, Atlanta, Newark, San Francisco and Detroit.

In all, about 125 of the 652 air traffic control "sectors" — most of them high-altitude airspace — were singled out by the FAA as being likely targets for the traffic flow restrictions in the coming months, officials said.

Agency officials acknowledged that the procedures, which include keeping planes on the ground, ordering pilots to reduce speed or re-routing some traffic in the air, are likely to cause delays, about which travelers have been complaining for months.

But Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole said the department already has taken a variety of steps to reduce delays and improve the additional flight restrictions needed to "keep pace with growth in air traffic."

"On any given day, the FAA restricts air traffic in as many as 30 sectors as necessary to the system at safe levels," Dole said in a statement.

The FAA has been under fire from the National Transportation Safety Board and members of Congress for not doing enough to ensure that controllers do not become overworked as the busy summer travel season begins.

South Korean students fight police, occupy church area

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Hundreds of students occupied the compound of the Roman Catholic cathedral, built barricades and battled police Thursday night with firebombs, rocks, wooden clubs and iron bars.

Several thousand demonstrators chanting "Down with military dictatorship" and demanding the ouster of President Chun Doo-hwan's ruling party clashed with helmeted riot police in downtown Seoul for a second day.

The National Coalition for a Democratic Constitution, an alliance of opposition politicians, religious and human rights activists, said Wednesday's protests were the start of a nationwide drive to oust Chun's government and initiate reforms for greater freedom.

The protests were timed to coincide with the convention of Chun's Democratic Justice Party, which on Wednesday endorsed the ex-general's designated successor, Roh Tae-woo.

Much of Thursday's fighting took place near the Myongdong Cathedral complex, which besieged students declared "a liberated zone" from which they launched repeated attacks at police columns.

Clashes erupted in the maze of narrow streets surrounding the cathedral as protesters attempted to break through thousands of riot police to reinforce their besieged colleagues. The great majority failed.

Fighting spread to other areas as columns of riot police hurled tear gas grenades to clear the streets.

Police halted and searched pedestrians and away scores of them, but authorities declined to give any arrest figures.

No official figures were available on injured protesters, but at least 12 students had been badly hurt, including several hit at close range by tear gas canisters.

New violence was also reported outside Seoul Thursday, with hundreds of students clashing with riot police in the streets of the southern port of Pusan as they tried to march on a U.S. cultural center.

Yonhap, the Korean news agency, reported protests on campuses in Pusan and in the central city of Daegu and said hundreds of students fought with police in that city.

The government warned it would sternly deal with disturbances by "impure elements."

Chun has said repeatedly that he will step down when his term of office expires in February, but opposition leaders have said they will not accept Chun's resignation to suspend talks on political reform until after the 1988 Seoul Summer Olympics.

The opposition wants the government to agree to direct vote in presidential elections expected at the end of the year. But Chun has refused to abandon the existing electoral college system, despite opposition that it ensures Roh's victory.

Ex-aide says Meese fired him for forcing Wedtech to pay debts

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former Commerce Department official said Thursday he was fired in 1983 by then-White House counselor Edwin Meese III after forcing defense contractor Wedtech Corp. to repay $3.2 million in delinquent loans.

Carlos Campbell, ex-assistant secretary in the Commerce Department's Economic Development Administration, said his removal came in part because he resisted pressure from former White House political director Lyn Nofziger and Nofziger's lobbying partner, Mark Bragg, to "rubber-stamp" a plan to assist the now-scandal-plagued firm four years ago.

Through their lawyers, now-Attorney General Meese, Nofziger and Bragg all denied Campbell's claims.

Campbell, who left the EDA amid allegations that he had awarded grants to friends' businesses, is one of several Reagan administration officials who were pushed out of their jobs shortly after impeding various forms of federal assistance to Wedtech, based in the Bronx, N.Y.

"The Wedtech proceedings had much to do with Meese removing me as assistant secretary," Campbell said in an interview. "I was sent in there to collect bad debts. . . . That's what I tried to do with Wedtech, and I was the one who paid for it."

The attorney general "used complaints about me from Congress as a smokescreen to remove me on trumped-up charges," Campbell said. "Meese knew about the Wedtech proceedings and he wanted me out of there in part because I had refused to roll over for Bragg and Nofziger."

Campbell also detailed the pressure applied on him by Bragg and Nofziger in a segment on ABC-TV's "20/20" program being telecast Thursday night.

Independent counsel James McKay, who is probing Meese and Nofziger's involvement with Wedtech, interviewed Campbell in March. Campbell supplied McKay additional information a month ago after McKay opened his criminal investigation of the attorney general.

Campbell said Bragg and Nofziger telephoned him or met with him on 10 occasions in a two-month span in mid-1983 urging him to speedily approve a modification to transfer loan guarantees from one New York bank to another.

Stock market shows gain for fourth day

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market managed to post a fourth consecutive gain in trading Thursday, recovering from the jolt of a late selloff in previous session.

The Dow Jones average of industrials rose 6.52 to 2,800, bringing its gain since the start of the week to 33.98 points.

Stocks took a tumble Wednesday afternoon in selling that wiped out most of a broad advance. But the market steadied before the close to finish just below the plus side.

Analysts said that showing pressed some traders who had regarded the market as vulnerable to profit-taking.

Another plus Thursday was drop in open market interest rates. Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in opposite direction from stocks, rose about $5 for each $100 face value.

Wall Streeters have shown strong reaction to the economic summit meeting that was held in Venice this week. President Reagan asserted today that the summit had produced "significant steps toward improving the international economic climate."

Renewal of state of emergency in South Africa sparks criticism

The renewed state of emergency declared by president P.W. Botha in South Africa will undermine the possibilities for ending the nation's internal problems, a U.S. State Department spokesman said.

"The South African government's activities and decisions show a lack of appreciation for the fundamental causes of unrest and violence there," Phyllis Oakley said in Washington.

She called the action unjustified and said the reinstatement "will only continue to undermine opportunities for dialogue which could lead to a resolution of South Africa's internal problems."

The new decree extending for up to a year the state of emergency declared June 12, 1986, was announced Wednesday by Botha, who said "the security of the state is at stake."

The decree allows unlimited detention without charge and gives the government broad powers to control protest and restrict freedom of speech, press and assembly.

In South Africa, criticism was more pointed.

"The government is at war with the people of South Africa," the Black Sash civil rights group said. "In its folly, it is eliminating all forms of non-violent dissent and all hopes for a peaceful, negotiated settlement. The government no doubt believes that the false sense of peace created by censorship and repression will continue."

Under apartheid, South Africa's 24 million blacks have no vote in national affairs. The 5 million whites control the economy and most services.

Most of the decree's regulations are identical to those issued 40 days ago and amended four times.

Some sections were rewritten to overcome judicial objections to new reports of unrest and military force action. And one allows police to hold detainees for days, instead of 14, before the detention needs to be authorized by a minister of law and order.

The government contends that unrest has dropped by 80 percent during the emergency, but the 1986 Parliament Wednesday would be expected to prevent a renewed cycle of violence and unrest.
