Korean officials find agreement with opposition

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Government and opposition negotiators broke a deadlock Monday by agreeing on constitutional revisions that will provide direct presidential elections and other democratic reforms.

Labor turmoil continued, with about 700 strikes for higher pay, better working conditions and free unions still unresolved.

Spokesmen for the governing Democratic Justice Party and main opposition Reunification Democratic Party said rewriting of the charter was expected to begin Tuesday.

"I am delighted," said Roh Tae-woo, head of the government party and its candidate to succeed President Chun Doo-hwan next February.

Optimism about the breakthrough was clouded by opposition leader Kim Young-sam's refusal to meet with Roh on Monday because of the political prisoners issue.

Kim canceled the meeting hours before it was to begin. He accused the government of rounding up more political prisoners and said a new crackdown might be under way.

Kim says about 330 political prisoners still are being held and demands that they be freed. He also wants civil rights restored to those opponents of the government still blacklisted for political activities.

"We are concerned that the government has launched a major suppression of moderate elements in the opposition," Kim told reporters.

Police broke up anti-government demonstrations in Seoul and other cities last Friday. It was the worst political violence since weeks of protest that led to Chun's acceptance of 30 of opposition demands for reform.

Authorities said 52 people arrested Friday were formally charged with violating a ban on the demonstrations, during which thousands of protesters armed with firebricks and sticks battled police.

Opposition leaders said they were talking on political prisoners and human rights before rescheduling a meeting between Kim and Roh. Such a meeting would be the major exchange between the two men and is considered important preparations for the presidential election.

Concern had grown that deadlock in the constitutional talks would impede chances of holding elections at the end of the year. Negotiations originally were to have concluded last week.

Progress came when the two agreed to a single five-year term for the president and the government withdrew a proposal that the president have power to dissolve the National Assembly.

Negotiators agreed to leave question of the voting age, now until new election laws are written. The opposition wants to lower age to 18.

Chun, an army general who gained power in 1980, is to leave office in February after a seven-term. Roh, also a former general, aided Chun in his rise to power.

The National Assembly and a national referendum must approve the revised constitution before elections can be held.

UAW chooses Ford to be strike target for contract talks

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — The United Auto Workers union chose Ford Motor Co. as its 1987 strike target Monday, a move that intensifies contract talks at the industry's No. 1 profit-maker and leaves General Motors Corp. temporarily on the sidelines.

"Our first objective is to establish a settlement pattern that is good for the workers and good for the industry by making stable domestic employment a part of how these companies do business," said UAW President Owen Bieber, whose choice of Ford was approved by union leaders.

"It's been said that Ford is supposed to be a hotbed of good ideas, so we're going to give them the opportunity to demonstrate that the same is true in the labor relations arena," Bieber said.

Ford chief negotiator Stanley Surma said Ford has bargained under the assumption it would be the target.

The GM and Ford contracts both expire at midnight Sept. 14, but the selection of Ford as the target means the union will seek to settle with Ford first.

The union will turn its attention to GM, the nation's largest automaker, only after a 200-member Ford worker council approves an agreement, which the union will try to force on GM in a process called pattern bargaining.

Chrysler Corp. doesn't return to the table until 1988, but the union also will try to include it in the pattern. The UAW is bargaining for 335,000 active GM workers and 104,000 Ford workers.

The UAW has rejected two GM offers and expressed displeasure with Ford's only offer in a month of bargaining. Bieber said neither company has made an offer that could serve as a basis for a settlement.

"This challenge is not primarily about money," he said. "It's about securing the jobs of American workers and it's about creating ideas to move us in that direction."

— UAW President Owen Bieber

"They made all that money because UAW Ford workers pitched and turned that company around. Bieber told a Ford worker group telling them of the target decision. "Now they have to give something back to this company and to UAW workers."

Negotiations at GM could be difficult because the union faces stiff battle in trying to force GM to accept a Ford contract, as GM negotiator Alfred Warren emphasized in a statement.

"There are sufficient differences between GM and its domestic competitors that demand a separate agreement specifically tailored to GM," Warren said.

In addition, GM plans to close at least 11 plants and cut 30,000 jobs in 1990.

Stock market prices rebound after sliding back last week

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices pulled out of last week's slide with a rally in quiet trading Monday, aided by a steadier bond market.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 70.15 points last week, rebounded 23.60 to 2,662.95. Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 165.81 million shares, against 156.33 million in the previous session.

The Dow Jones industrial average finished August, after some wide swings in both directions, with a net gain of 90.88 points.

The market's chief problem, analysts said, was a weak dollar in foreign exchange and rising interest rates.

Rates steadied in the government bond market, finishing moderately lower for the session. And stock traders evidently decided it was time to catch up buying after the market's dramatic rise in the last spring through mid-August.

Brokers said money managers investing institutions are eager to avoid showing large cash positions when they make their quarterly reports to clients a month from now.
