Barometer for economy rises slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Commerce Department said Tue day its chief economic baromet rose 0.5 percent in July, a gain con omists said signaled continued mo erate growth for the rest of the year and into 1988.

The Index of Leading Indicato posted its sixth consecutive mont increase with the healthy July a vance matching the May increas and following an even stronger percent rise in June.

While some analysts said the string of advances showed the ecco omy would pick up momentum the second half of the year, other said lackluster consumer spend and the impact of rising interes rates would hold the economy bad "What this suggests for the em omy for the rest of the year is m of the same: choppy, uninspin growth, but growth nonetheles said Donald Straszheim, chief con mist for Merrill Lynch, the N York brokerage firm.

In another report Tuesday, In another report Tuesday, a Commerce Department said order to U.S. manufacturers dipped percent in July to $204.9 billion, was the first decline in six mont and it was blamed on a 6.8 perce drop in the defense category. Orders in the civilian categor rose a tiny 0.1 percent, the poor showing since April, as auto deak cut their orders sharply in an effu to reduce a backlog of unsold can

In a third report, the government said construction spending suffe a second consecutive monthly a cline, edging down 0.2 percent July to a seasonally adjusted annu-rate of $391.8 billion following a even bigger 1.3 percent fall in Jun Analysts blamed this weakness a continued slump in apartm construction and in non-residen building, areas hurt by the impact the new tax law, which elimin various real estate tax shelters. The leading index, compose
