Owner of Herald buys Houston Post

HOUSTON (AP) — An affiliate of MediaNews Group, owner of the Dallas Times Herald, said Thursday it had acquired the Houston Post from its Canadian owners for $150 million in cash, just months after being rebuffed in an effort to buy the larger Houston Chronicle.

The purchase of the Post from Toronto Sun Publishing Co. of Ontario, Canada, marks the first time daily newspapers in the state's two largest markets have come under single ownership.

In March, MediaNews president William Dean Singleton bid $415 million for the Houston Chronicle, but was turned down by the non-profit Houston Endowment Inc., which signed a deal with the Hearst Corp. for $400 million. Hearst later upped its price to $415 million after the state attorney general's office questioned the acceptance of the lower bid.

Singleton said he has been trying to buy the Post for a year, making two previous offers. He would not discuss any details of those offers.

The morning Post and the evening Chronicle have been engaged in a war similar to the battle between the Dallas Times Herald and the larger Dallas Morning News.

"We firmly believe that, under Texas ownership, the Post will thrive and grow in its competition with the New York-owned Chronicle, Houston's evening newspaper," Singleton said.

Gene McDavid, vice president and general manager of the Chronicle, said he expects the war to continue.

"The competition has been so severe, I can't imagine anything could happen to make it worse," McDavid said.

The Post's circulation for the period ending March 31 was 309,400 daily and 356,424 Sundays. For the same period, the Chronicle's circulation was 406,084 daily and 531,528 Sundays, according to the Audit Bureau of Circulation.

Singleton said the Post was bought by the Gloucester County Times Inc., a Woodbury, N.J., affiliate of Dallas-based MediaNews. The transaction is expected to be completed Nov. 1.

Toronto Sun Publishing bought the Post in 1983 for $100 million from H&C Communications Corp., privately held by Oveta Culp Hobby of Houston and her son, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

Sun president Doug Creighton said the newspaper has remained profitable since then, despite troubled economic times.

MediaNews will pay $150 million in cash, plus an additional amount on March 31, 1993, based on the gross revenues of the Post over a five-year period ending Dec. 31, 1992, Singleton said.

Sun Publishing will get $1.25 for each $1 of additional newspaper revenue over an annual base equal to 1987 revenues, he said.

Donald Hunt, the Post's publisher since 1983, will remain, and Singleton said he did not plan any reductions in the staff of 1,200.

"Don Hunt and his management team have met the challenge of operating profitably in the tough Texas economy while showing impressive growth both in advertising market share and circulation," Singleton said.

Singleton, 36, was little known in Texas media circles until last year when he acquired the Dallas Times Herald for $110 million from Los Angeles-based Times Mirror Co.

He started his career as a part-time reporter at age 15 in his hometown of Graham, and six years later bought his first newspaper for $10,000.

Singleton teamed with Richard Scudder, a fourth-generation New Jersey newspaper publisher, to acquire the Times Herald.

With the addition of the Post, MediaNews Group will own 27 daily newspapers and 28 non-dailies. The Post will be the 11th newspaper owned in Texas, one of eight states where MediaNews publishes.

"Singleton has a knack for producing a profit pretty quickly in unfavorable situations," said Bruce Thorp, a newspaper industry analyst with the Washington, D.C., office of Lynch, Jones & Ryan. "He'll work to cut costs I'm sure as much as he can."

He likened the Post sale to the purchase of the Times Herald.

He said he wasn't surprised the Post sold for so much less than the Chronicle, "because the outlook for the Houston Chronicle is much more favorable."

He cited the Chronicle's advantages in circulation and advertising.

"The Post is not likely to be profitable for several months," Thorp said. "It might require a comeback in the Houston economy for it to produce a profit."

"The battle will be to keep the paper alive. Singleton is pretty determined to do that I'm sure."

Unexplained blood confuses detectives, elderly home owners

ATLANTA (AP) — Human blood found on the floors and walls of a house was not the same type as that of an elderly dialysis patient who lives there, but authorities still don't know where it came from, a State Crime Lab official said Thursday.

"It could be a homicide, it could be a hoax," Larry Howard, the lab's director, said.

Detective Steve Cartwright said investigators had found no evidence of a crime, and police spokesman Marion Lee said officers were not assuming it was a hoax.

Police were called early Wednesday to the home of William Winston, 79, and his wife, Minnie Clyde Winston, 77, who reported finding blood on the floors and walls of the house they have rented for 22 years. Lab tests Wednesday confirmed it was human blood.

Howard said Thursday that test results showed the blood was type O, while Winston has type A. He said more samples from Winston and his wife would be tested, however.

Winston, whose blood is cleaned by dialysis machine at a clinic because of kidney problems, said he didn't know where the blood came from.

"I'm not bleeding," he said. "My wife's not bleeding. Nobody else was here."

Mrs. Winston said Thursday she was weary of all the attention the bizarre discovery had brought.

"I still don't know where the blood came from, and I'm tired of all these people asking me all these questions," she said. "If anybody comes here today, I'm not going to open my door."

She said the six-room brick house in southwest Atlanta was besieged with calls and visits Wednesday from those intrigued by the mystery.

Jury convicts embassy guard of failing in duty

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — Marine Sgt. Robert Stufflebeam, a former Moscow Embassy guard, was acquitted by a military jury Thursday night on charges that he had sex with Soviet women and lied to authorities about it but convicted him of a lesser charge.

After deliberating about 2½ hours, the Marine jury convicted Stufflebeam on two counts of dereliction of duty. Those misdemeanor convictions, which could result in a 12-month military prison term, stemmed from Stufflebeam drinking in an off-limits Moscow hotel bar on two occasions.

"I feel very much relieved," Stufflebeam said. "There was no way for the government to prove their case."

After the verdicts were read, the military judge, Marine Lt. Col. Eligah Clark, adjourned the proceedings for the day. Clark said the court-martial would resume Friday morning, when he would hear evidence to be used in sentencing Stufflebeam.

Stufflebeam could have faced 14 years in prison had he been convicted on all nine counts.
