Mattox: Treasurer will step out of race for governor

AUSTIN (AP) — Another possible Democratic candidate for governor in 1990, Attorney General Jim Mattox, said Monday he thinks Treasurer Ann Richards will change her mind about seeking the job.

"I doubt very seriously if she's going to be a candidate, when all is said and done," Mattox said. "It's just a long time until the filing deadline."

Mattox declined to assess the threat Richards would pose as an opponent, but he said if she makes the race, it will be divisive for the Democratic Party.

"You have a set group of people that support people within the party, and if you have two candidates trying to get support, by definition it's divisive," Mattox said.

Richards spent several weeks testing the political waters before telling the Associated Press on Sunday night that she will run for governor. She said that only unanticipated developments could keep her out of the race.

"There is a lot of enthusiastic support," she said. "I feel real positive about it. Short of anything unexpected, it all looks good."

Richards became the first major-party candidate to declare a definite intention to run. Mattox said he probably will announce after the 1988 presidential election.

"Some politicians get into races without having the support of the people, and I don't intend to do that," Mattox said. "I want to make sure the support's out there before I make any kind of official announcement."

Mattox said he believes he now has the support to run.

Lt. Governor Bill Hobby and San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros were considered possible Democratic candidates until each recently announced he would not seek the job.

Republican Governor Bill Clements has said he would not seek reelection in 1990.

Richards said, "I just know everything looks good for me. All I can say to you is at this point, I feel really positive about making the race."

Richards added that she would be pleased to run on a Democratic ticket with Comptroller Bob Bullock, who last week announced he will run for lieutenant governor.
