Students in the A&M venture dynamics physical education class play a game of tag. Three members hold hands and try to prevent a fourth member from touching a specified member of the three. The first few weeks of the class consists of games that are geared to allow the students to get to know one another and to learn to trust other members of the class. The class will later go out to a rope course and participate in various games and activities that are based on the trust built up during the games. The students also learn how to rappel down a wall at the Bratton Firemen's Training School as well as run an obstacle course. The class is designed to build team trust in the participants as well as to give them a greater awareness of one's own capabilities that the class inspires.

What the health plans don't tell you

IMPORTANT QUESTIONS WE'RE SURE YOU WOULD LIKE ANSWERED

HEALTH PLAN DOCUMENT

ARE YOU LOOKING FOR A HIGH QUALITY HEALTH PLAN?

A Health Maintenance Organization

In all the information being circulated about clinic-based health plans, a few facts may have escaped your attention.

For instance, HMO advertising seldom mentions the limitations imposed on your ability to see any physician you choose. Or that these HMO plans offer no dental coverage whatsoever. Little emphasis is given to the sparse provisions such plans make for psychiatric services, or the strict limits imposed on elective surgery. Texas A&M employees are rarely told they will be required to surrender their PCS Card if they drop their present insurance to join a health plan.

Nothing is said about the limitations on hospitals such plans cover. Or about what these plans won't cover: things like physical therapy, a job or a life insurance policy, psychological testing your child may need for school, even the blood transfusion you may require during surgery. In fact, one prominent health plan excludes 18 specific areas of health care from its coverage.

So if the promise of a single monthly premium that covers all your family's health care costs sounds too good to be true...perhaps it is. Just be sure you know the facts before you trade your proven medical insurance for the latest trend in health care delivery.
