Agriculture major learn about jobs at A&M exposition

By Sharon Foreman Reporter

Companies interviewed agricultugoals and potential job opportunities this week at the Agricultural Career Exposition sponsored by the Texas A&M College of Agriculture.

ACE Chairman Rebecca Meyer said 31 companies — including Holly Farms, Granada Land & Cattle Co. and Dow Chemical were represented at the career fair.

"The purpose of ACE was to bring faculty, students and compet-itive representatives together in an environment where they could exchange career ideas, goals and objectives," Meyer said.

Dr. Terry Greathouse, associate riculture students by supplied an of the College of Agriculture, pany representatives who are dean of the College of Agriculture, said ACE brings agribusinessmen and students together and gives them the opportunity to get ac-

"ACE is a great program that helps sharpen A&M students' career goals and plans," Greathouse said.

The career fair, Greathouse said, also gives administrators informaton about upcoming trends and new technology in agribusiness.

"Thus, we (the administration) can adapt curriculum at A&M to these changes and help students better prepare themselves for the futu-Greathouse said.
