Senate votes to restore budget-balancing law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Wednesday to restore the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law, renewing the threat of across-the-board spending cuts unless Congress and the president reach a compromise on reducing the deficit.

The bill was passed 64 to 34 and sent to President Reagan, whose support for Gramm-Rudman has wavered recently. Administration officials said no decision had been made on whether Reagan should veto the bill.

The revised plan, approved by the House on Tuesday, would bring back the law's threat of automatic spending cuts, redrafting a provision the Supreme Court found unconstitutional in the original.

But it would abandon the original timetable for a balanced budget by fiscal 1991. That goal would take until fiscal 1993, with most of the deficit reduction put off until after the 1988 election.

Like the original Gramm-Rudman passed two years ago, the plan was an amendment to a bill raising the ceiling on the national debt. The December 1985 vote first put the limit above $2 trillion. The new bill would allow $2.8 trillion in Treasury borrowing, enough to last until May 1989.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., argued against the bill, calling it a "Trojan horse" for the Democrats to impose their policies. Echoing a White House concern, he said the threat of the spending cuts would be used to pressure Reagan to increase taxes and would surely result in a cut in military spending.

White House spokesman Marlin

Fitzwater said, "Any Gramm-Rudman fix which is designed as the principal purpose of cutting or raising taxes is an ill-conceived one that we have grave doubts about."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said the bill was signed to pressure Reagan.

"Sure," said Bentsen, "we're also putting this Congress in a box, forcing it to make tough, hard choices."

In all, $23 billion in deficit reduction would be required, compared with $37 billion in the fiscal 1988 budget, but not going to be an easy task, he said.

Hurricane Emily hits, kills 2 children, hurts 2 in Caribbean nation

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Hurricane Emily swept through this Caribbean nation Wednesday, killing two children and injuring two other people but otherwise causing little damage.

"It's a blessing from God that Emily didn't wreak the havoc we all feared," Civil Defense Director Eugenio Cabral said. "Also, people took precautions and didn't overreact."

Hurricane David killed 1,000 people when it hit the Dominican Republic in 1979.

Emily toppled utility poles and uprooted trees when it hit. It lost strength as it crossed over 12,000-foot peaks and exited over the northwestern part of Hispaniola, the island shared by the Dominican Republic and Haiti.

When its maximum sustained winds dropped from a high of 110 mph to below the 74 mph hurricane level, Emily was downgraded to tropical storm status.

But forecasters warned that Emily was expected to gather strength and become a hurricane again as it moved at 18 mph on a northwest course over warm Caribbean waters.

At 11 a.m. CDT, Emily's poorly defined center was near latitude 20.6 north, longitude 72.7 west, or 425 miles southeast of Nassau, the Bahamas, according to the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla.

A U.S. Air Force reconnaissance plane reported winds of 60 mph, center officials said.

Hurricane warnings remained in effect for the Turks and Caicos islands to the northwest of Hispaniola, and for the central and southeast sections of the Bahamas, said center meteorologist Mark Zimmer.

The storm was expected to turn northeast about 300 miles south of Florida and bypass the United States, Zimmer added.

Emily struck the Dominican Republic's southern coast at Ocoa Bay, 65 miles southwest of Santo Domingo, at about midnight with 110 mph winds, 15-foot waves and heavy rain.

Two children, ages 4 and 7, were killed and two other people were injured when a small house collapsed on the outskirts of the capital, police said.

About 3,000 people in Santo Domingo and the town of La Vega, 100 miles northwest, were evacuated to churches, schools and public buildings on higher ground. Electricity in the capital was intentionally cut off to prevent accidents and short circuits.

Las Americas International Airport remained closed Wednesday morning and the streets of downtown Santo Domingo were nearly deserted, except for a few buses and taxis.

Schools and most public offices and private businesses were closed.

Health fails for grandson of car pioneer

DETROIT (AP) — Ford II's condition was upgraded Wednesday from "serious" to "very serious," as the executive began developing pneumonia, hospital officials said.

Ford, 70, remained in intensive care unit of Henry Ford Hospital and is undergoing surgery, spokesman Chris Kasas said.

"Today's events are encouraging," Ford's physician Bruce Steinhauer, said in a statement read by Kasas. "The inflammation and (development of) fibrosis (in the lungs) continue in appropriate treatment and supportive support."

"He has experienced a problem in heart function, but the major problem is still his lung," Ford, grandson of the founder of both Ford Motor Co. and Ford Hospital, admitted Sept. 12 after treated several days at a hospital in the Detroit suburb of Pointe Farms.

Ford was president and chairman of Ford Motor Co. from 1945 to 1980, and retired the company on Oct. 1, 1980.

He remains a member of the board of directors for the making company and chairman of the Ford Foundation.

Astros 12-year

of car pioner

HOUSTON (AP) — One of the Houston Astros' most popular and successful executives began developing pneumonia, hospital officials said.

Cruz has racked up records since he started with the Astros in 1975, but he slipped earlier this season. He has been in the hospital since the All-Star break.

The 40-year-old Cruz is leaving the team with the hopes of another club.

"I thought they were doing something," Cruz said. "The inflammation and fibrosis (in the lungs) continue in appropriate treatment and supportive support."

"They offered me a contract, but the reason is the major problem is still his lung."
