Carpenter hurls Aggies to 5-1 mark

By Anthony Wilson Sports Writer

Julie Carpenter pitched all six of the Texas A&M softball team's games this weekend in the Aggie Fall Invitational and won five of them, four by shutout.
 "Julie Carpenter got pressed into service and got to pitch every inning, throw every practice and throw every game. I'm just proud of her," Coach Bob Brock said. "I think Julie did an excellent job."
 "I think she gave up one good solid hit of any consequence and that was in the Sam Houston game in the first inning. And we're talking about six games later."

Carpenter, however, was not quite as enthusiastic over her performance.
 "For early in the season, pitching all of the games, it was tough," Carpenter said. "There was nothing else I could do. I was the only pitcher. I can't say I did a super job."
 Official standings weren't kept in the tournament, which was held at Bee Creek Park. Brock said the purpose of the tournament was to give the team and younger players a chance to play together.

"We don't really emphasize winning the tournament," Brock said. "It's just a real relaxed tournament. It's just to get the team to play as a team, try a lot of extra things and what have you. It's just really kind of for the freshmen."
 "It's been kind of anti-climatic in a way because our freshman pitcher (Catherine Stedman) hurt herself, so she hasn't been able to show what she can do."
 On Saturday, the Lady Aggies won their first three games of the tournament, defeating the Ranger

Texas A&M's Rhonda Halbert slides in for a run against Ranger Junior College Saturday in Bee Creek Park. A&M went 5-1 in the tourney, losing only to Sam Houston State in the final game, which was plagued by rain.

Junior College first squad 14-2, Stephen F. Austin University 3-0 and the Ranger second squad 11-0.

On Sunday morning, A&M faced Southwest Texas State University. The Lady Aggies mustered three runs on only five hits as Carpenter pitched her third straight shutout of the tournament.

In the second inning, catcher Erika Eriksson doubled home Stacey Crainer, who had singled, to score A&M's first run. In the third inning, right fielder Renee Blaha walked and scored on an error by the shortstop on a ball hit by Liz Mizera. A&M scored its last run of the game when Mizera walked, advanced to second base on a sacrifice by Erin Newkirk, moved to third on Carrie Heightley's single and scored on a sacrifice fly to left field by Zina Ochoa.

A&M beat the University of Texas at Arlington 8-0 in their second game Sunday. Julie Smith, Heightley and Blaha scored in the first inning. That trio also scored in the second when Mizera cleared the bases with a triple to left field. Mizera then scored on a single by Newkirk. Carpenter once again pitched a shutout, allowing four hits and striking out three.

In the final game, A&M lost to Sam Houston State University 2-1 in rainy weather. The Lady Aggies only hit the SHSU, but unlike the Lady Kats, were unable to capitalize on their opponent's mistakes.

Although Carpenter gave up only two hits, she blamed the loss on the weather.
 "I haven't thrown in the rain in a long time," she said.

LSU defeats Ags in volleyball tourney

By Tammy Hedgpeth Sports Writer

The Texas A&M women's volleyball team came out on the short end this weekend as it placed third in the Texas A&M Invitational Friday and Saturday in G. Rollie White Coliseum.

The tournament consisted of three other teams — Louisiana State, New Mexico State and North Carolina, with LSU capturing the first place trophy. NMS finished second and North Carolina rolled in fourth.

Friday, LSU defeated NMS in five games 7-15, 15-13, 15-13, 7-15, 15-4. Senior Simone DePaula led the offense for LSU with 14 kills on 37 attempts while sophomore Monica deMello Freitas paced the defense with 17 digs.

Friday night, the Lady Aggies overpowered the North Carolina Tar Heels in four games 16-14, 17-15, 14-16, 15-7.
 The Lady Aggies had a slow start but bounced back quickly. The offense was powered by junior Cheri Steensma who recorded 23 kills on 44 attempts for an attack percentage of .522. Sophomore Yvonne Van Brandt kept the defense alive with 20 digs.

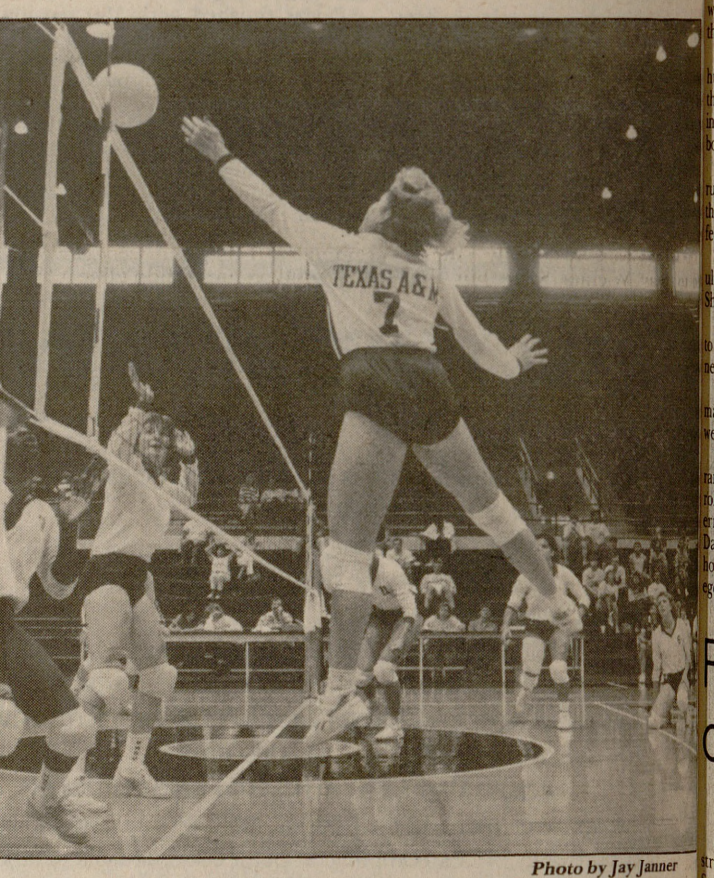

In Saturday's competition NMS recorded two victories by defeating North Carolina and

A&M to take second place. A&M had a slow day by losing not only to NMS but also LSU.

LSU knocked out A&M 15-13, 15-6, 16-4 in the final match of the tournament for the first place standing. Even though the Fighting Tigers came out ahead, LSU Coach Scott Luster was not pleased.

"I'm pleased that we won," Luster said. "I'm not pleased with our overall play. We're still kind of in a 'hump time' and we're struggling. We're still trying to get together and play good ball. But it feels good to come in and play two out of three decent matches. This was probably one of the best tournaments that we've gone to."
 A&M Coach Al Givens was not pleased either.

"I was real disappointed in the way we played overall," Givens said. "We are not playing very well right now and what that's a function of I'm not real sure. That's something we are going to have to determine quickly. We take ourselves out of matches by making service errors."
 "There are some individual efforts out there, but there is not a unified team effort. What that's a function of I do not know. It could be a lot of things — just the chemistry of the court."

Outside attacker Michelle Whitwell returns a New Mexico State shot in Saturday's match. A&M won that match but later lost to LSU.

U.S. team loses second consecutive Ryder Cup

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Seve Ballesteros of Spain won the match that blunted a belated rally by the U.S. team and provided Europe with its first victory on American soil in the Ryder Cup golf competition Sunday.
 Ballesteros' 2 and 1 decision over American leading money winner Curtis Strange gave the Europeans an unbeatable lead after Sunday's matches at the Muirfield Village Golf Club course.

The final score, with each match worth one point, was Europe 15, U.S. 13.

It marked the Europeans' second consecutive victory and their first in the United States in the biennial matches that began in 1927.

The Americans, five points behind going into Sunday's final 12 singles matches, needed to win nine points — and almost did it.
 Their rally, however, ended on the par-4 18th hole of the course that American captain Jack Nicklaus designed at Muirfield Village.

In the crucial early going, Dan Pohl, Larry Mize and Ben Crenshaw each lost one-half point with a bogey or worse on the 18th. It was enough to turn the tide.

Pohl, in the second match of the day, was tied with Howard Clark of England going to the 18th. But Pohl was short in two, dumped his third into a bunker and made double bogey. He lost the hole, the half-point for a tie and the match, 1-up.

Mize, the Masters champion, 1-up going to the 18th. But he dropped into trouble, had to take a penalty drop and eventually made bogey. Torrance's par-4 won the hole and salvaged a half point from a match the Europeans appeared to have lost.
