Cowboys' White among 15 union players to cross the picket line

NEW YORK (AP) — Another 15 players, including quarterback Danny White and eight-time Pro Bowl center Mike Webster, crossed picket lines Wednesday as union chief Gene Upshaw criss-crossed the country trying to prevent more defections.

That made it 39 players on 15 teams who have returned to practice camps since the NFL strike started nine days ago, according to an Associated Press count. The union has 1,585 players under its jurisdiction not including first-year players on injured reserve.

Joining White and Webster were wide receiver Roy Green and defensive end Curtis Greer of the St. Louis Cardinals, Pittsburgh running back Earnest Jackson, and three New Orleans Saints, including two starting defensive linemen, Bruce Clark and Tony Elliott.

Upshaw, meanwhile, met for 2 1/2 hours with the Steelers then returned to his offices in Washington, bringing to nearly 8,000 miles the air time he has logged since Sunday.

No negotiations were planned. In Washington, however, union and management lawyers met with the National Labor Relations Board to discuss procedural points in the unfair labor practice complaints each side has filed against the other.

Despite the new defections, Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, continued to maintain that players were solidly behind the strike.

"I don't think three or four guys in the National Football League constitute the will of the players," he said in Pittsburgh. "We have more guys out than they have in, and I think that will be the case when we finally reach an agreement."

White, the Dallas quarterback, said he decided to go back to work when he heard Upshaw say, "The union is in for the long haul."

"I realized right then that he wasn't representing me," said White, who lost $45,000 when last Sunday's games were canceled and who has a clause in his contract cutting his salary from $750,000 to $500,000 if he starts less than eight games this year.

"I'm in agreement with most of the issues the union is after but not in agreement with the method being used."

Webster, who started on the Steelers Super Bowl teams, had similar sharp words for Upshaw's management negotiator Jack Dolan.

"I'm not ready to turn my cap over to Jack Dolan or Gene Upshaw," the 14-year veteran said, who walked out of the meeting with shaw and drove 70 miles to Johnstown, Pa., where the Steelers' placement team is practicing. A few hours later he was joined by Jack Dolan, the team's leading ground game last year.

Clark, who played in the 1983 Super Bowl, and Elliott were joined in turning to the Saints by wide receiver Eric Martin and cornerback Reggie Sutton and Michael Adams. Then came the return to St. Louis Green, a one-time All-Pro receiver and Greer, who had three sacks in the first two regular season games of the NFL lead.

White says he crossed picket line because of contractual incentives

IRVING (AP) — Dallas quarterback Danny White yielded to heavy financial pressure and became the third Cowboys' veteran to ignore the strike and cross the picket line Wednesday, while resigning from the NFL Players Association.

He was expected to be followed by running back Tony Dorsett and defensive end Ed Jones.

White, burdened by several recent business deals that went sour, said, "I decided to come back in on Monday when I heard (union chief) Gene Upshaw say the union was in it for the long haul. I realized then he was not representing me."

"The financial situation I'm in and some clauses in my contract were a factor," he said.

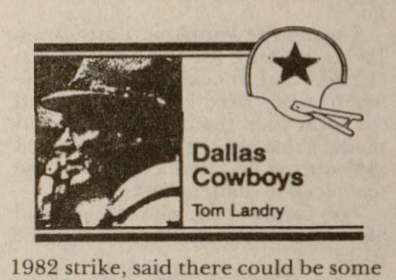

Players who don't resign from the union and cross the picket line are subject to fines from the union, so White decided to resign.

Dorsett and Jones got letters from management warning they could lose their annuities if they didn't report.

"My mind was made up for me," Dorsett said. "I have no choice."

They have until 9 a.m. Friday to check in to be able to play in Sunday's game against the New York Jets and qualify for the annuities, which are deferred payments based on length of service. Cowboys management would not disclose the amount due Dorsett and Jones.

White, a 13-year NFL veteran who was an outspoken critic of the 1982 strike, said there could be some ill will against him.

"Time will tell if there are any hard feelings for me when it is all over," White said. "But I am morally opposed to the strike."

"I have a hard time looking myself in the mirror when I'm making $725,000 and go on strike like I'm being treated unfairly. Other players feel they have been mistreated, but I just can't convince myself."

He said he was "sure the union will tell everybody I'm taking bread off their table. Most will misunderstand where I'm coming from."

But player representative Doug Cosbie said he understood why White, who is losing $45,000 per week, had to return.

"Danny explained his problems to us," Cosbie said. "We will stick together through all of this. The strike is still for the majority and the majority is still out."

Cosbie added that even if Dorsett crosses the picket line, "he will still be behind what we are doing. We have strength in numbers."

Linebacker Jeff Rohrer said,

"Money is the reason Danny had come back in, not because he believed management's position. The same goes for Tony. He might not, but the seas won't be calm."

Veteran defensive tackle Randy White and Don Smerek refused to honor the picket lines at the NFL Linebacker Chris Dulin and wide receiver Johnny "Lam" Jones, who were on the injured reserve list. They were reported for practice.

Dorsett earlier referred to Randy White as "Captain Scab" for reporting to the substitute team. He later disclosed that White would receive a $3 million annuity if he didn't play Tuesday night.

Smerek said he was glad to see Danny White. "It takes some heat and me and Randy," he said.

According to Danny White's contract, he must start eight games in 1987 to qualify for his $725,000 salary. His salary would drop to $500,000 if he started only seven games.

Club President Tex Schramm said he did "the right thing in sending out those letters. We don't want to see those players lose their annuities."

White said he thought he would be ready to start against the Jets. "My shoulder is a little sore, but I think I will play," he said. "I'll be adjusting mentally with this (substitute) team. There will be a lot of things I can't get away with. Right now I'm just trying to learn the names of the players on the team."

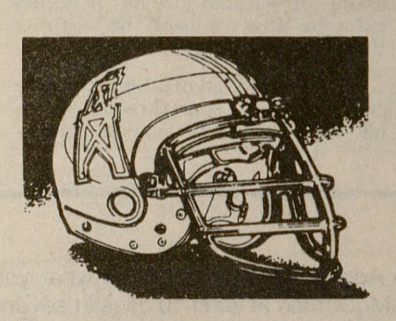

Houston Chamber of Commerce joins fight to keep Oilers home

HOUSTON (AP) — There was no movement in negotiations between the Houston Oilers and the Houston Sports Association to keep the team from relocating, but the Chamber of Commerce announced it was officially getting into the act.

The National Football League team is being lured by officials of Jacksonville, Fla., to make the Gator Bowl its home instead of the Astrodome. The team's lease at the Astrodome expires at the end of this season.

Don Jordan, chairman of the board of the Houston Chamber of Commerce, said Tuesday the members of the chamber's executive committee had authorized him and executive director Gerald Griffin to work with both the Oilers and HSA.

Jordan said committee members discussed a plan to build and sell 72 new sky boxes in the Astrodome at an estimated cost of $30,000 each. "I think the chamber could be active in making this a priority with its members," Jordan said. "I certainly think if the city of Jacksonville can buy 80 sky boxes, the city of Houston can afford 72."

At the same time, the Harris County Commissioners Court voted Tuesday to hire architect Gary Wilson to prepare several preliminary seat configuration plans for the Astrodome that will include the proposed luxury sky boxes on the press level field.

County Judge Jon Lindsay said it was important for the court to hire Wilson because of plans for the sky boxes must be ready within two weeks — in time for a kickoff sales meeting for the sky boxes.

Signing a contract any later than Oct. 15, however, could delay the completion of the planned 10,000 extra seats in the Astrodome, Lindsay warned. The county needs to start that work by Oct. 15 to make sure it is done by the start of the 1989 football season, he said.

Oilers General Manager Les Herzog said there was no movement on his talks with HSA and he did not expect any of the rest of this week. Herzog also said a planned Friday trip to Jacksonville to discuss the city's bid had been indefinitely postponed.

"There is no meeting planned with the Jacksonville people, haven't been able to have a meaningful conversation with the Jacksonville people, because they've been in New York. But mostly our meeting with them is off for the same reason. I can't meet with HSA — I've been so tied up with the strike situation that that is where all of our energy has gone."

Lindsay and Jordan, president of Houston Industries, said they are confident the city will not lose the Oilers. Lindsay said he believes possibilities of the Oilers and HSA ink a contract are "60 to 80 percent to the good."
