Giants' Craig outpaces Rodgers to win Manager of Year award

NEW YORK (AP) — Roger Craig, whose skill and inspiration lifted the San Francisco Giants from last place to a division championship, was named the Associated Press Manager of the Year Monday.

Craig received 46 votes from a nationwide poll of writers and broadcasters prior to postseason play, one more than Montreal's Buck Rodgers.

Tom Kelly, manager of the World Series champion Minnesota Twins, was third with 37 votes. Whitey Herzog, who led St. Louis to the NL pennant, was fourth with 20 votes followed by Detroit's Sparky Anderson (17), Milwaukee's Tom Trebelhorn (5) and Pittsburgh's Jim Leyland (1).

The Giants finished the season 90-72, six games ahead of Cincinnati in the NL West.

San Francisco took a 3-2 lead in its best-of-seven playoff with the Cardinals, but were shut out in the final two games at St. Louis.

"We had a great season," Craig said. "It was tough on everyone losing to St. Louis, but it was an outstanding season, and losing one or two games doesn't ruin that. Like Whitey Herzog said, the toughest part is getting there, making it to the playoffs."

Craig was named the Giants' skipper on Sept. 18, 1985, by general manager Al Rosen. The Giants were 56-88 under Jim Davenport to that point, and finished the season 62-100. It was the first time in the franchise's history that the Giants had lost 100 games.

"I was only there 18 games (in 1985) and didn't really learn much about the players then," Craig said. "Half of them were hurt and the other half wanted to go home. They were already talking about going hunting."

Craig used his experience as a player, coach and scout to make sure the Giants hunted for victories the following season.

"In spring training of 1986, I realized we had some pretty good players on the club," Craig said. "It wasn't a team that was going to lose 100 games. At the All-Star break when we went into first place, the players were believing they could win. I'd been saying it all along, but maybe they didn't really believe me until then."

The Giants finished 1986 at 83-79, third in the West, and were only the ninth team in major-league history to have a winning record following a 100-loss season.

The team slumped to 22-31 for May and June and fell 5½ games behind in third following a four-game losing streak that ended Aug. 5.

Then, while Cincinnati and Houston faded down the stretch, San Francisco reeled off 29 victories in 40 games.

"Whether we win or lose four games in a row, he's always the same," second baseman Robb Thompson said. "If we lose four in a row now, everybody knows 'Do get your dauber down.'"

That's one of Craig's pet expressions along with "Humm" and "sandlot chatter" which the manager uses to denote hard-nosed play and has adopted as the team's unofficial slogan.

As a starting pitcher for Brooklyn he recorded a World Series victory as a rookie in 1955 and picked up championship rings that year and in 1959. But en route to a 74-98 lifetime record, he also lost 46 games in 1962 and '63 for New York Mets teams that went 40-120 and 51-111.

His first major-league managerial job lasted two years in San Diego where he was fired after the 1974 season despite leading the Padres to a 84-78 record in 1978.

Craig taught the split-finger fastball to Houston's Mike Scott and helped build Detroit's staff into World Series champions in 1984 as pitching coach. He left after the season in a dispute over a new contract.

Glanville: Oilers need to be wary despite come-from-behind wins

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers have rallied to win three games, including Sunday's 31-29 thriller over Cincinnati, but Head Coach Jerry Glanville isn't letting the club's best start since 1980 go to his head.

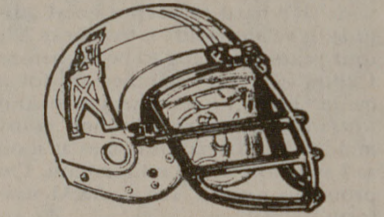

"You don't get into a full strut yet, what you do is get ready to play the next game," Glanville said Monday. "We'll enjoy this one until tomorrow and then get ready for the most important game of our lives."

"It's the most important because it's the next one."

The Oilers had plenty to celebrate after scoring 17 unanswered points in the final six minutes against the Bengals.

Quarterback Warren Moon engineered the comeback and scored the winning touchdown on a quarterback sneak.

Allen Lyday's fumble recovery on a kickoff helped set up a touchdown, Andrew Jackson's blocking gave Moon time to complete crucial passes and Keith Bostic intercepted a pass on the final play of the game.

"It's a credit to a lot of people who had to come up with a lot of plays," Glanville said. "What makes the win so significant is that our big play players were out and we still won the game."

Running back Mike Rozier sat out the second half with an ankle injury and wide receiver Ernest Givins was sidelined for the fourth quarter with bruised ribs.

Cornerback Patrick Allen did not make the trip after he suffered a reaction to an anesthetic last week during minor surgery.

Moon hit Drew Hill with a 33 yard pass to the Bengal 12 and sneaked over from the one for the winning touchdown with 55 seconds left.

"When they throw us a parade at the end of the year, a lot of people will want to jump on Warren's bandwagon," Glanville said. "I've been there from the start."

Moon, booted in the first quarter of last week's game against Atlanta, completed 18 of 29 passes for 191 yards.

"He's always been my guy, and he showed again today you'd better stick with him for a full 60 minutes," Glanville said. "He just keeps getting better every week."

Glanville said the most disappointing aspect of the game was the blocking of the running backs, with the exception of Jackson, a former replacement player.

"When we put him in the game we were able to start moving the ball," Glanville said. "His block on the inside linebacker gave Warren time to throw the pass to Hill."

The Oilers play the second game of a three-game road trip at San Francisco Sunday. They play at Pittsburgh the following week before returning home to play Cleveland.

McWilliams: UT not good enough to win games filled with mistakes

AUSTIN (AP) — Coach David McWilliams of Texas said Monday his Southwest Conference leaders aren't good enough to make mistakes and still win football games.

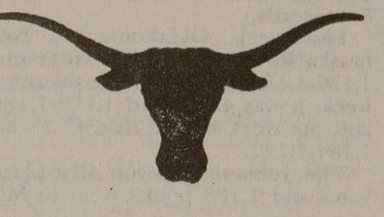

Texas is 4-3 for the season but has moved to the front of the SWC with a 3-0 record.

The Longhorns play Houston Saturday night at the Astrodome in Houston.

"(Houston) will really spread you out all over the field, McWilliams said at his weekly news conference. "Our defensive backs are going to think they've been in a track meet after this week."

Texas whipped a fired-up Texas Tech team 41-27 Saturday, and McWilliams said his team is improving and gaining confidence.

"We haven't gone out and blown anybody out," he said.

"We're not a team that just goes out there and wins just because we're out there. . . . We've had to earn the victories."

McWilliams said he had tried to be realistic with his squad, and "the honest evaluation is, when we've eliminated mistakes, we've won. When we haven't eliminated mistakes, we haven't won."

"That's where we are right now. I kind of like that. It kind of puts it on our squad to know that we can't relax."

Tailback Eric Metcalf, among the nation's leading all-purpose runners, missed the second quarter of the Tech game with a hip pointer, but McWilliams said he should play against Houston.

"This morning he was much better. It (the injury) wasn't as severe as they (trainers) first said," McWilliams added.

Punter Alex Waits' pulled hamstring muscle might cause him to miss the Houston game, McWilliams said. Waits, one of college football's top punters, was replaced by Bobby Liljedahl in the Tech game, and the Red Raiders blocked Liljedahl's first punt for a touchdown.

Offensive tackle Ed Cunningham, who had arthroscopic knee surgery Oct. 20, is possible for Houston, McWilliams said.
