German-style fun in New Braunfels

by Deborah L. West

Beer, ompah music, sausage, potatoe pancakes, corn-on-the-cob and funnel cakes can be found this weekend at the 27th annual Wurstfest in New Braunfels.

Suzanne Herbelin, executive secretary of the Wurstfest Association of New Braunfels, Inc., says the festival, now in its second week, features food, fun and music.

"The festival is a salute to sausage," she says. "The community celebration of it has grown every year."

More than 60 bands, including Clover Leaf, High Toppers, Alpinfest, Seven Dutchmen and the Bavarian Village Band are playing at Wurstfest again this year, in addition to one special attraction.

"A volunteer fire department's band from Braunfels, Germany, will play several times," Herbelin says. The band, called Musikzug Der Freiwilligen Seuerwehr Bonbaden, also played at the festival in 1983.

"Their music is different," Herbelin says. "I think a lot of students will like it."

In fact, there are many attractions that students can enjoy, she says.

"We always have a lot of students that like to dance and drink beer come to Wurstfest," Herbelin explains.

Along with the performing bands, Wurstfest also features several craft booths run by the local churches. Beer steins, t-shirts and other souvenirs are sold at the booths.

The Wurstfest Association is a non-profit organization. All profits generated by the association and 90 percent of the concessions' profit from Wurstfest are funneled back into the community, Herbelin says.

The concessions, run by other non-profit organizations like the Rotary Club, the Lions Club and the German-American Society, raise money for special restoration projects, building projects and landscape improvements. One of this year's big fund raisers is the Children's Emergency Shelter, Herbelin says.

One of the major projects built by Wurstfest funds should be familiar to many students.

"The Chute Shoot on the Comal River is probably the best example of a project that was built with Wurstfest money," Herbelin says. "I'm sure more than a few Aggies have ridden the rapids and gone down the innertube chute in warmer weather."

The grounds admission at Wurstfest is $4 and Wursthalle admission is $2. Children under 12 get in free.

To get to Wurstfest, take Highway 21 west to San Marcos and then take Highway 35 south to New Braunfels. Signs will lead to Landa Park and the Wurstfest Grounds.
