Cuban inmates free hostages in Louisiana; 90 held in Atlanta

OAKDALE, La. (AP) — Cuban inmates Sunday threw down their weapons and released the 26 hostages they had held for eight days at a burned-out federal prison after a Cuban-born bishop urged them to accept a government agreement.

At the riot-torn Atlanta federal penitentiary, Cuban inmates released four of their hostages early Sunday, leaving 90 people still captive.

The freed hostages, some of them grinning broadly, walked from the Federal Detention Center near Oakdale at 2:25 p.m.

Cheering and weeping relatives ran alongside the bus that carried the men to Humana Hospital in Oakdale for checkups. All of the hostages appeared to be in good health, Louis Deumite, the hospital's executive director, said.

After releasing the hostages, some of the 950 Cuban inmates threw their homemade knives, clubs, hammers and boards studded with nails into a pile in the yard of the detention center. One Cuban waved an American flag.

Cubans seized control of the facility on Nov. 21 and the federal penitentiary in Atlanta two days later in riots sparked by a government announcement that many inmates would be returned to Cuba.

The inmates demanded that they be allowed to remain in the United States.

Federal officials have said they would delay any deportations until the Cubans' cases could be reviewed individually.

The rioting left one person dead, 53 people injured and the prisons badly damaged by fires and looting.

About a half-hour after the hostages were released, four representatives of the inmates signed the agreement with the government. The signing was witnessed, at the inmates' insistence, by Auxiliary Bishop Agustin Roman of Miami's Roman Catholic archdiocese.

J.D. Williams, a regional director of the federal Bureau of Prisons who was the government's chief negotiator, refused to reveal details of the agreement, saying it might jeopardize negotiations with Cubans in Atlanta.

The agreement followed a videotaped appeal by Agustin Roman, who urged the Cubans to release their hostages and sign the pact with federal authorities.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III, in a statement released by the Justice Department in Washington, said, "While this is understandably a time of rejoicing and thanksgiving, the Department of Justice will not rest until the situation in Atlanta is also peacefully concluded and all the hostages there are released."

Williams said about 200 Cubans, classified as minimum-security prisoners, will be sent from Oakdale to the Army base at Fort Polk, La.

The rest will remain at Oakdale, where they would reside in four damaged dormitories until they could be processed and transferred to any of more than 40 other federal lockups across the nation, Williams said.

On Sunday, Atlanta inmates used a tractor inside the compound to gather garbage and dump it into a pit. Outside the prison walls, Special Weapons and Tactics teams went through their exercises.

Lawmakers to form details of deficit-reduction policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional bargainers took four grueling weeks to fashion a $76 billion, two-year deficit-reduction pact with the Reagan administration. And that is just the beginning.

Lawmakers returning from their weeklong Thanksgiving recess now must chisel into law the details of the agreement — whose taxes will be increased, which programs will be slashed — and also enact federal spending bills for the year.

Their goal is to complete the task in about three weeks, in time for Christmas week.

To accomplish so much in what for Congress is so little time, legislative leaders will have to get rare levels of obedience from House and Senate members.

October's stock market collapse created a sense of urgency that sparked the talks.

But it still took four weeks to work out a deal because of the complexities of balancing the White House's distaste for taxes with the Democratic-controlled Congress' desire to cut defense and protect domestic programs.

Yet enacting the deficit-reduction agreement will be just as delicate a political juggling act.

Two separate bills will have to be passed conforming with the pact. To achieve that, numerous players will have to be made to march in line: A dozen congressional committees that will be protecting their turf and a Senate- and House-full of politicians intent on guarding their electoral futures.

In addition, Reagan administration officials are likely to have some input into the shaping of the bills, further complicating the process.

One measure would raise $9 billion in taxes in the 1988 fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, and $14 billion more next year.

It also is supposed to adjust government benefit programs such as Medicare, farm supports and student loans, as well as federal workers' salaries, to save $4 billion more, and include billions of dollars in asset sales and other items.

Paradoxically, the defense spending bill already approved by the House appropriations committee contained less spending than the deficit-reduction package would allow.

Thus, the lawmakers will have to figure out how to distribute about $4 billion in additional military spending, up to $285.4 billion.

Wisconsin counties bill residents for Depression-era welfare relief

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The heirs of elderly Wisconsin residents who needed county welfare money during the Great Depression to pay a 90-cent electric bill or buy a $1.50 pair of shoes may get a surprise after their relatives die.

Some Wisconsin counties and municipalities require that people who got local welfare relief, no matter how long ago, pay it back.

However, neither the county nor, in many cases, the family, will find out about the bill until the recipient has died, county officials said.

In one case earlier this fall, the Rock County Social Services Department billed the estate of an 86-year-old woman for $100.21.

Irene Schwengels, a coal miner's widow with two toddlers, got assistance in 1935 and 1936. She used $5.72 for a ton of coal to heat the home, $19.63 to see a doctor and the rest for food.

The demand for repayment incensed her sister, Enid Wichel of Beloit.

"I can see going back 10 years, but to go back 50 years . . . that was the Depression and people were starving," Wichel said. "It isn't the money, it's the principle."

However, officials in Rock and Milwaukee counties and the city of Madison also argue principle in collecting the half-century-old debts.

"It's usually a small amount, and in essence, it's been a 50-year, interest-free loan," said James Bahler, financial investigator for the Rock County Social Services Department.

Psychiatrists recognize winter blahs as depressive ailment

BOSTON (AP) — Common wintertime blahs can turn into a serious clinical depression that the American Psychiatric Association now officially recognizes as an ailment and says will afflict some 450,000 people this season.

With the shortest day of the year approaching in December, it is the peak season for the depression known as seasonal affective disorder syndrome, or SADS, with symptoms such as excessive eating, increased sleeping and weight gain.

"We're looking at more than just a passing of the blues," said Dr. Martin B. Keller, director of outpatient research in psychiatry at Massachusetts General Hospital. "In the fall I get lots of calls from people who feel this depression coming on."

Keller served on a 12-member panel that studied a series of disorders for the psychiatric association and recommended establishing a clinical outline for SADS.

The condition is treatable but not with what might seem the logical remedy: a plane ticket to the Bahamas. "That's a very appealing thing to do but I don't think it's necessarily good medical practice," Keller said.
