Soldier testifies to killing pregnant wife with knife

BELTON (AP) — A sobbing soldier testified Thursday that he killed and dismembered his pregnant wife after she told him he was not the father of their baby daughter or unborn child.

"She told me she had to go out to get pregnant," Pfc. Earnest Jack Chappelle said at the murder trial where he is fighting to receive a ruling of voluntary manslaughter.

Chappelle is accused in the July 31 slaying of Lisa Marie Chappelle, 19, whose head and arms were found in a dumpster near the University of Texas in Austin on Aug. 1.

Chappelle testified he used his Army knife and a carpenter's saw to dismember the body. He said he put the parts in bags and placed them in dumpsters at Fort Hood, where he was stationed, and Austin.

He also said he removed the unborn child from his dead wife and placed the body in a separate bag.

"I named her," Chappelle said in the testimony he gave during the lengthy trial. "Lisa and I had agreed to name our second baby Carolyn if it was a girl. It was a girl," Chappelle spoke of the unborn baby that was killed when his wife was slayed.

The soldier, in civilian clothes, was called to the witness stand by defense lawyer Hollis Lewis of Killeen, who has said he would ask jurors to convict Chappelle of the lesser offense of voluntary manslaughter, which carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison.

Chappelle could be sent to prison for life if convicted of murder.

In his testimony, Chappelle recounted the marital problems he and his wife faced. He said she had returned to their Killeen trailer home in an effort to reconcile the reportedly unstable marriage. However, Chappelle cited her inability to care for their year-old daughter and then asked his wife to leave the property.

She picked up the child and said, "I'm going and you can't stop me," he testified.

He said he grabbed her and kept her in the trailer. After she made a phone call she returned to the kitchen, where Chappelle was using his Army knife on a rabbit he had hit with his car.

"She told me I couldn't stop her from taking the baby," he testified, adding that she insulted his manhood.

"She told me I wasn't (the daughter's) father," Chappelle said. "She also told me I wasn't the father of the baby she was pregnant with."

"I was thinking, 'I've got to stop her. She is going to take my baby.' I hit her in the chest."

Chappelle said he had the Army knife in his hand when he hit her. He testified that he continued to stab her, but had not intended to kill her.

"I just wanted her to leave, leave me alone, leave my baby alone, just leave, just leave," he said.

Chappelle recalled that he then tried to save the seven-month fetus but failed.

He said he went to his parents' home in San Antonio but did not mention the slaying. A week later, after hearing that body parts had been found in the Austin dumpster, he went to Killeen police.

"I didn't know whether or not I had killed her," he testified. "I remember now."

Woman claims spirits adviser stole money

HOUSTON (AP) — A spiritual adviser accused of bilking $3,600 from a British woman who believed a curse caused her stomach pains remained in jail Thursday on a theft charge, police said.

The adviser, known as Sister Zulu, was arrested Wednesday on a charge of theft by deception, a third-degree felony, Houston police officer J. Lee said.

Lauretta Smith, 44, of Gloucestershire, England, said she had sought the woman's help in curing her stomach pains.

Within a few weeks, Smith said she had sent the woman $3,600.

"She was so convincing," Smith said. "She kept saying, 'Look, you need help.'"

"She said, 'The spirits want you straight away,'" Smith said.

Smith said with $30,000 or she would die. She flew to Houston where she met the adviser Tuesday at a local motel.

Smith told the woman she did not have the $30,000 and demanded her $3,600 back.
