Hart leads Democrats Bush dominates GOP

HOUSTON (AP) — Gary Hart is in front of the pack of Democratic presidential contenders in Texas in the party's March 8 primary while Vice President George Bush continues to dominate the Republican field in his home state, according to a poll released Sunday.

While Bush retains a commanding lead in the GOP race in Texas, Hart's high negative ratings indicate his Texas lead of the Democratic field is "shaky. He is vulnerable," according to University of Houston political scientist Richard Murray.

With colleague Kent Tedin, Murray conducted the Jan. 4-11 survey of 1,020 Texas registered voters exclusively for the Houston Chronicle and the Dallas Morning News.

Of the 399 poll respondents who said they were likely to vote in the Democratic primary, 26 percent said they would vote for Hart and 17 percent for the Rev. Jesse Jackson. The other candidates — Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore, Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt and former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt — are far back.

Forty percent of the Democrats are undecided.

Hart, a former Colorado senator, dropped out of the race last May in the wake of a scandal with a Miami model but got back in last month.

Murray attributes Hart's lead in part to the fact that most of the other Democratic contenders, with the exception of Jackson, are not well known.

The margin of error in the samples of likely primary voters is plus or minus 5 percentage points. The poll, with an overall margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points, was conducted through the UH Center for Public Policy.

Bush, who calls Houston home, has the support of 57 percent of the 347 poll respondents who said they are likely to vote in the state's March 8 GOP primary. Bush has an "incredibly positive" rating of 90 percent among the likely GOP voters, almost all of whom know who he is, Tedin said.

Bush's closest Texas competitor is Kansas Sen. Robert Dole, who has

Candidates continue debate centered on social security

AMHERST, N.H. (AP) — Jesse Jackson blasted fellow Democratic presidential candidates Sunday for social security proposals he said would leave the nation "divided and destroyed" as Republican Bob Dole accused two opponents of "just saying no to everything."

Fresh from a pair of weekend debates, presidential candidates from both parties renewed the arguments sharpened in those televised confrontations in Iowa and New Hampshire.

The politically sensitive subject of social security continued to provide the brightest rhetorical sparks.

Gary Hart triggered a new round of debate among Democrats with a call for taxing 85 percent of social security benefits for those who make more than $32,000 a year.

That fell short of former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt's call for full taxation of those benefits, but Hart's deficit-cutting proposal sparked controversy after its unveiling late Saturday night in his Ottawa, Kan., hometown.

Jackson rejected the ideas, saying they would undermine the universal nature of the social security system.

"If we try to separate the cream from the coffee, we will end politically divided and destroyed," he said on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley." "We should not tamper with that social security system."

But Sen. Albert Gore Jr. was open to such ideas, saying 50 percent of such benefits should be taxed.

"The level of taxation is unjust," the presidential candidate from Tennessee said on a show. "That is something that should be on the table. The game. But basic social security should not be touched."

And social security could generate heat on the Republican side as well, with Dole coming from the Saturday Dartmouth College. He said Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont and others should support their ideas for dealing with social security.

"As I listened to Pete and night just saying no to everything to this, no to that... you govern, too. You have choices too," Dole told a house at the Sir William in Amherst.

Vice President George Bush recently the front-runner in the Hampshire GOP primary, he held private meetings in the day and appeared on one television interview show.

Bush hit on the same theme the Saturday debate, but he has become convinced proposals for a line-item veto long history of supporters.

neutrality. (Percentages are 100 because of rounding.)

Among likely Democrats he is rated negatively by 31 percent, positively by 52 percent, with 17 percent expressing neutrality.

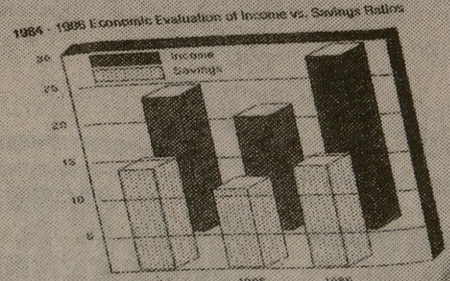

On the Republican side, former Houston congressman Harris County Republican man, is "incredibly strong" in Tedin said. "Texas Republican the guy."

When asked to name the candidate with the best chance of winning, 76 percent of likely GOP voters named Bush.

According to the above graph the last three years have been marked by unusually high and unpredictable trends in the economy. The national savings ratio has been greatly reduced, reflecting the fact that inflation has been so high that it has eroded the value of savings. The new administration recognizes that the nation's savings ratio had to be reduced quickly before the United States enters a state of deep economic recession.
