Fired worker: Nuclear plant
may be unsafe

AUSTIN (AP) — The South Texas Nuclear Project is an "accident awaiting the time to happen," according to a fired STNP supervisor who said Wednesday that safety checks were not made on parts of the plant built with inaccurate instruments.

Lonnal Wilhelm told reporters that his efforts to tell quality control officials and federal regulators about the problem were ignored.

He said a quality control official told him, "Come up with some fancy words and make this go away."

But a spokesman for Houston Lighting & Power Co., managing partner of the project, said Wilhelm's concerns were addressed and no safety problems were found.

Wilhelm worked at the plant construction site from 1978 until he was fired in 1984.

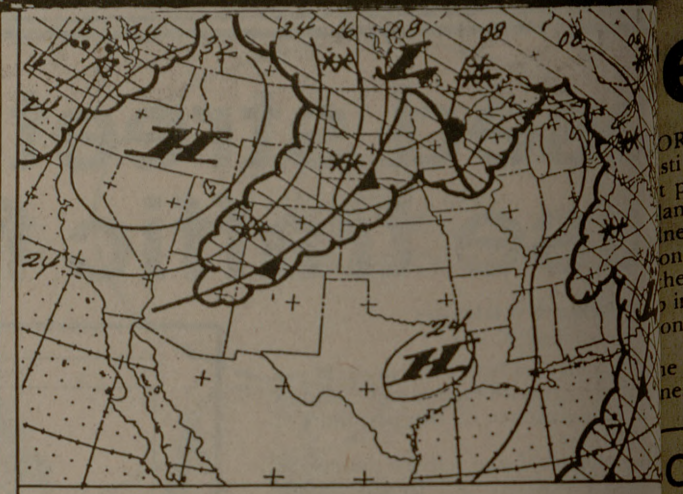

From February 1982 until August 1984 he was supervisor of the Measuring and Testing Equipment Calibration Laboratory, which tests instruments used to check safety-related items.

"We looked at the actual construction and found no problems in the areas he was concerned about," HL&P spokesman Graham Painter said of Wilhelm's allegations.

The company did find problems in "routing" of reports and notices concerning instruments that were not properly calibrated when used.

"Some were not getting back to where they were supposed to flow back to," Painter said, adding that the problem has been corrected.

Map Discussion: The great winter storm of recent days is making a fast-moving into the Canadian Maritime Provinces. This should bring an end to the snow problem temporarily. A new and quite strong upper-level system over Columbia will drive another cold front southeastward into the Plains states. Temperatures will prevail east of the Rockies.

Forecast: Today, tonight and tomorrow: Partly cloudy with cool days and cold nights. A high temperature of 45 degrees. The low temperature tonight will be in the 20s, with the high on Friday near 46 degrees. Surface winds will be northerly throughout the forecast period.

Weather Fact: Aleutian low — a low pressure center located in the vicinity of the Aleutian Islands. It represents one of the primary centers of action in the atmospheric circulation of the northern hemisphere and is most active in winter months.

Pit bull terrier attacks lead mayor to call for ban of breed in Galveston

GALVESTON (AP) — Two recent pit bull terrier attacks, including one on an 83-year-old man who later died, have prompted the mayor to call for an ordinance banning the breed from this island city.

"We've had two unusual attacks here recently," Galveston Mayor Jan Coggeshall said. "We don't have to wait any longer. We need to do something now."

A postal worker was hospitalized last Friday after being knocked down and bitten twice by a pit bull while she delivered mail. In December, Johannes Wilkins, an 83-year-old retired seaman, died from injuries he received when he was mauled by two pit bulls Nov. 20.

"This used to be a pretty safe community," Coggeshall said. "Enough is enough."

The mayor's proposal, which would outlaw pit bulls and give their owners 30 days to move them outside city limits, will be discussed during the city council's workshop session.

If other council members support the proposal, the city attorney would draft an ordinance to be voted on by council members.

Sandy Nash, the 39-year-old carrier attacked last week, supports such a proposal.

"Most people think they're friendly, that they won't do anything like that," Nash said. "I just can't trust people who have pit bulls like that."
