Koldus: Students must use abilities to solve problems

By Jeff Pollard
 Staff Writer

Dr. John J. Koldus, vice president for student services, told student Senators at their first meeting of the semester Wednesday night that it is up to them to use their resources to push for the solutions to problems faced by the student body.

"Politics go outside of a meeting room," Koldus said. "You, as Senators, must go out and let the student body know that what you do is important to them."

Now that the spring semester is underway, the Senate leaders are looking for ways to prove this importance to their fellow students. According to Jay Hays, speaker of the Student Senate, this is a task that the student government is ready to take on.

"We ran around beating our drums for so long that changes are slowly being made," Hays said. "We spent the fall semester getting our research together. Now we are in position to do something."

Among the projects discussed were those dealing with the appointment of a student to the Board of Regents and the conversion of the Rudder Tower dining room into a faculty lounge.

According to Mason Hogan, student body president, there is a good chance to get a non-voting, student seat on the Board of Regents, even though many problems must be ironed out.

"We, as students, are not here to carry out administrative duties," Hogan said. "I just think that students should be there to intervene when problems occur."

As far as the faculty lounge/tower dining room, Hogan said that this issue will come down to a legal battle between school officials and former students who have taken up the battle against the lounge.

"Petitions are being circulated that will show the school that the lounge is an issue among students," Hays said. "The main complaint is that the dining room will only be open to paying members of the faculty club."

The relationship between the Faculty and Student senates is on the rise. Hays said that there is a new and unprecedented effort among the faculty to listen to the problems and ideas of students.

A good example of that is the final exam schedule that was ironed out in a joint committee of Faculty and Student Senators.

The compromise schedule, which was presented to the Student Senate by Tom Black, chairman of academic affairs, and was unanimously passed by the 64 Senators present, calls for seniors to take finals on Monday and Tuesday of finals week and the rest of the undergraduates to take finals Monday through Friday.

"This will allow seniors to graduate while a few people are still on campus," Black said. "It also means that teachers will not have to make up two different final exams."

The proposed schedule still must be approved by the Faculty Senate and then by school administrators. If approved in time, the schedule will go into effect this semester.

Other items discussed include:
 • Project visibility, which will inform the student body of what the Student Government is doing and what they have planned. Senators will speak to organizations on campus, telling them about how they can get involved in student affairs.

• The special events line is still in operation and looking for information. The purpose of the events line is to inform people about what is going on around campus, especially events associated with Student Government. The number is 845-0845.

• Sixteen positions are still open on Student Senate; anyone interested can contact Garrett Leeson, speaker pro tempore of the Senate.

Bomb experts disarm device after scare

CANTON (AP) — An incendiary device that had prompted the evacuation of about 50 people from downtown was dismantled by bomb disposal experts Wednesday, authorities said.

The bomb disposal squad from Fort Hood dismantled the device by about 4:30 p.m., Van Zandt County Sheriff Travis Shafer said.

It was not immediately clear whether the device was a bomb, he said.

People in the business district of this East Texas town were evacuated at about 12:30 p.m. after the device was discovered next to a gas meter, Van Zandt County Sheriff's dispatcher Alice Martinez said.

Gary Petre of Lone Star Gas Co. discovered the device at about noon when he was reading meters at a downtown business, about two blocks from the county courthouse. The small box was about 14 inches wide and contained a timer, wires and an explosive.
