Weather Watch

Key:
⚡ - Lightning ☁ - Fog ⚡ - Thunderstorms
•• - Rain ❄ - Snow ☂ - Drizzle
⚠ - Ice Pellets ☂ - Rain Shower • - Freezing Rain

Sunset Today: 5:58 p.m. Sunrise Saturday: 7:17 a.m.

Map Discussion:
The Pacific weather system will weaken with time diminishing prospects of significant precipitation over inland areas. An arctic high over the Yukon will move southeastward to the United States/Canadian border. Elsewhere, high pressure dominates and a general warming trend will be evident under zonal flow aloft and southerly low level flow, particularly east of the Rocky Mountains.

Forecast:
Today: Partly cloudy and warm. High near 73 degrees. South winds at 10-17 mph. Tonight: Fair and mild. Low Saturday morning in the 50s. Winds will be light, less than seven mph, through the night.
Saturday: Partly cloudy and warm with the maximum temperature reaching 75 degrees. Winds will be southeasterly at 12 mph gusting to 18 mph.
Weather Fact: Frontogenesis - (see map). The initial formation of a front or frontal zone, in general, an increase in the horizontal gradient of air mass properties (moisture, pressure, wind and temperature, which are the primary atmospheric variables).

Black man flees courtroom, fearing decision of white jury

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A black murder defendant said he fled the courtroom before his trial ended because he feared a mostly white jury deciding his fate.

Pernell Dale Bratcher, 22, was arrested Wednesday after about 45 hours of freedom when Bexar County sheriff's deputies tracked him down and found him hiding under a bed in a mobile home. Bratcher was on trial for the slaying of his girlfriend, Debora Sue Cotton, 19, whose decomposed body was found in a Christmas tree box last May 7. "I'm innocent," Bratcher told reporters Wednesday as he was escorted to the county jail. Bratcher said he fled because he feared the racial makeup of the 12-member jury, which had only one Hispanic and one black. "I wasn't going to let 12 people decide my life," he said. "There were too many white people." Shortly after Bratcher fled Monday, the jury convicted him and later sentenced him to life in prison.
