U.S. hockey team starts off well after drubbing Austria in opening

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — This U.S. hockey team is already one game up on the last one, but the coach who lost to the Americans Saturday night and beat them four years ago says the 1984 team was better nevertheless.

"The 1984 team was a stronger team," Austria coach Ludek Bukac said in the aftermath of the 10-6 loss in Saturday's opening game. "The players were generally better skilled. It was a faster team, and it played with great emotion."

Bukac coached the Czechoslovakian team, which beat the United States 4-1 in 1984 at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia.

That loss was the second straight to start for the Americans en route to a disappointing seventh-place finish, not even in the medal round.

But that failure had nothing to do with lack of ability, Bukac said.

"The reason they didn't do better was that they had a lot of pressure to win" because of the "Miracle on Ice" gold medal at Lake Placid in 1980, he said. "They weren't able to play under the pressure."

The pressure will return quickly for the current U.S. team, however, as it faces Czechoslovakia Monday night. The third-seeded Czechoslovaks were upset in their opening game by West Germany 2-1.

"I don't think the Czechs had a good day," U.S. Coach Dave Peterson said. "They've been stung. My guess is that they'll react and come back strong against us."

The Americans have to hope their play and attitude from Saturday night carries over.

"There was no trouble getting up for the game," starting goaltender Mike Richter said of the Austrian game. "Everyone was excited as can be."

Getting off to a good start was especially important for the Americans, considering what happened in 1984.

"It was great to get it under our belts," Richter said. "It was my first international game at this level, and it was important to win our first game."

While the decision was never in doubt for the Americans once they broke open a 2-1 game with four goals in the second period, play did get sloppy. The Austrians scored five goals in the third period against backup goaltender Terreri in the final 9:05.

"We didn't play as well as we have in the third period," Tony Granato said. "We didn't have many chances. But it was close as the score indicated."

The victory was typical of the Americans' play this year through the 60-game pre-Olympic schedule. Nine players scored, 1984 veteran Corey Miller, two goals and two assists.

Scott Fusco, the other member of the 1984 team, also goal for the Americans.

"Corey's played well all year," Granato said of his center. "There wasn't any reason to think that he wouldn't score. Corey's a scoring leader and a team player."

While Peterson was satisfied with the result, he did find his team "too tight" in the opening period.

"If we were more relaxed in the first period, we would have done better," Peterson said.

Navratilova overpowers Shriver to win Virginia Slims tournament

DALLAS (AP) — Martina Navratilova, demonstrating the power game and shot-making style she'll need to unseat Steffi Graf as the world's top woman's player, roared past Pam Shriver, 6-0, 6-3 Sunday afternoon in the Virginia Slims of Dallas finals.

Navratilova, the tournament's top seed, won the Dallas championship for the eighth time in the last 10 years. She earned $50,000 for her first title of the 1988 season.

The match was touched with controversy as Shriver, Navratilova's friend and doubles partner, hotly disputed a service call and expressed her frustration several times.

Navratilova needed only an hour to defeat Shriver for the 22nd straight match in their head-to-head competition. Shriver, the second seed, has lost 32 of 35 matches to Navratilova and hasn't beaten Navratilova since the 1982 U.S. Open.

Navratilova called the match her best since 1986 when she was the undisputed No. 1 player in the world.

"Today I hit the ball better than I did at any time last year," Navratilova said. "Steffi's still No. 1 but if I put together some matches like I had today, I can (overtake her)."

A service break in the match's first game set the tone as Navratilova went on to breaks in the third and fifth games.

The third-game break angered Shriver when she was called for a double-fault at deuce. Shriver felt the ball was clearly good but replays showed the serve was near the line.

Shriver got the advantage back two points later, but Navratilova went on to the service-break.

Shriver expressed her anger at the linesman who called the ball out, and at the umpire who refused to overrule the call. She bounced a ball high into the air and kicked a cushion during the changeover.

Shriver's emotion carried into the first game of the second set as she double-faulted twice to give Navratilova a service break.

Shriver began to serve more calmly after experiencing problems with her first serve in the first game of the second set. In the third game of the second set, Navratilova was not about to be beaten.

"I didn't get over my nerves," Shriver said. "I haven't been so livid in years. There was a lot of out there that wasn't printable."

"I knew the way she was going to come up with a shot back in the match, so I was trying to hit that second serve."

Leading 5-3 with Shriver to stay in the match, Navratilova back-to-back passing shots for other service break to win the
