Map Discussion: A ridge of high pressure along the West Coast and a trough of low pressure east of the Rocky Mountains dominate the upper levels. The front that passed through Bryan-College Station Thursday morning continues its trek into the eastern United States. The result is dry weather over the west and wet weather in the east. Because of an upslope flow and cool temperatures, expect a combination of rain and snow showers in West Texas. Another strong upper-level low will move through the local area tonight and Saturday morning, posing at least some threat of additional precipitation.

Forecast:

Today: Mostly cloudy and cool with a high of 54. Winds out of the east at 10 mph.

Tonight: Overcast and cool with a 30 percent chance of rain and a low of 38. Winds out of the east at seven mph.

Saturday: Mostly cloudy and cool with the clouds decreasing in the evening. The high will be in the low to mid 50s with winds out of the east at seven to 12 mph.
Weather Fact: Paleoclimatic (geological climate) - The climate of a time period in the geologic past; that is, a "prehistoric" climate. Geologic evidence indicates most, but certainly not all, of the last 500 million years enjoyed a genial climate, that was occasionally interrupted by the ice ages.

Publisher claims lack of knowledge of news reports

HOUSTON (AP) — Soldier of Fortune's publisher testified Thursday he was unaware of news reports linking classified ads in his magazine to criminal cases and that he may have been the only staff member to believe such ads should continue.

Robert K. Brown, in a second day of testimony in a federal court trial that seeks $22.5 million in damages from the magazine, said if he had known of the reports, he would have investigated to see if his magazine was somehow involved.
"I would have conducted an investigation to see if it was an aberration or a pattern," he said. "If we could have developed a pattern, then I would have discontinued the ads."

A Texas family is accusing the publication of negligence for running an ad that is linked to a woman's 1985 slaying. The magazine bills itself as the journal of professional adventurers.

The ad brought Robert Black together with John Wayne Hearn and led to the murder-for-hire of Black's wife, Sandra, of Bryan.

Black is on Texas' death row for paying Hearn $10,000 to carry out the killing. Hearn is serving three life terms in Florida for murder.

Marjorie Einmann, Mrs. Black's mother, and Gary Black, the victim's 18-year-old son, are seeking $2.5 million in actual damages and $20 million in punitive damages.

Hearn's ad appeared in four issues of the magazine in late 1984, seeking former Marine and Vietnam veterans and weapons specialists with jungle warfare expertise for "high risk assignments" in the United States or overseas.

Brown said Thursday he had not read in Denver-area newspapers about an extortion indictment that linked the magazine ads in May 1984 to a so-called "collection agency" allegedly involved in kidnap, extortion and death threats.

Numerous stories about the extortion ring were run in 1984 but Brown said he may have been out of the area during that time or merely didn't see them in the newspapers.

Brown also denied Thursday that a new formal advertising policy adopted in May 1984 was in response to police inquiries about crimes that may have been linked to classified ads in the magazine.

The policy established for the first time since the magazine began in 1975 a formal rejection procedure for classified ads.

Coincidentally, Hearn's ad arrived at the magazine in mid-May 1984.

Plaintiffs' attorney Ron Franklin suggested the policy was inaugurated after a New Jersey State Police detective asked the magazine for help in April 1984 in a case he believed was linked to magazine ads. Brown denied the suggestion.

The policy listed about a dozens reasons why a classified ad could be rejected, including one that suggested the ad would "encourage illegal activity."
