Pokes' White may retire after 12 NFL years

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White, bothered more by off-the-field criticism than by his lingering wrist injury, says he is thinking of retiring after 12 NFL seasons.

"It's not an easy decision," White said Saturday at a football clinic here. "The wrist is fine. It's not a question of anything having to do with me physically. I'll never be able to bend it."

"Pathologically, I'm having a problem. Emotionally, I'm fine. I've gotten about 90 percent of the strength back and I can still improve that a little bit. It's merely a matter of adapting."

"It's not a physical question. It's more a psychological question," added

White. "It's just a kind of beating you take off the field. That, for me, is something I've grown kind of tired of. It takes a little fun out of the game."

White, 36, has played for Dallas since 1976 and has been blamed by some fans for not leading the Cowboys to the Super Bowl like his predecessor Roger Staubach.

"At some point, it's going to get to the point where the game's not as much fun for me as it once was. And that's when it's going to hit me. . . that it's time to retire," White said.

He said he still is bothered by the wrist injury on his throwing hand. His right wrist was broken on Nov. 2, 1986, when he was sacked by New York Giants defensive lineman Carl Banks and has not healed properly.

White said the wrist remains stiff and bothers him primarily when he throws on the run or when soft "touch" passes are required.

Still, White said his current plans are gearing up for the Cowboys' training camp in July at Thousand Oaks, Calif.

"Physically, right now I'm ready to go. I've been working out and I'm going to continue to work out. I'm planning to go back to camp and be ready to play. I think (Dallas Coach Tom Landry) obviously would like to have me there."

"As far as the season is concerned, Tom must decide whether (backup) Steve Pelleur is ready or not, when he'll be ready and if he's seen enough of Steve to know if he's going to be the type of quarterback he wants. They've got to decide who's going to be their quarterback for the next 10 years."

"But I'm not going to concern anybody at this point (and say I'll be there or 'No, I won't'). Nothing happens between now and then to change my mind. I'll let my mind. I think it would be better because too many things could happen. I just want to keep my options open."

Should White decide to keep playing, one of the Cowboys' first games could be here at Sun Bowl Stadium, where the St. Louis Cardinals hope to relocate and play home games.
