Money for bills credited to official's bank account

DALLAS (AP) — Federal funds intended for utility bills of poor people were instead credited to the account of the woman who ran the energy assistance program for the Dallas County Community Action Committee, a newspaper reported Monday.

Payments of $2,150 in federal funds to the Garland Power & Light account of former DCCAC energy coordinator Carolyn Smith are being investigated by the Texas attorney general's office and the Dallas County district attorney's office, sources told the Dallas Morning News.

Smith, 43, was laid off from her job at DCCAC last fall because of a funding shortage. She would not say whether she received any DCCAC money.

The 22-year DCCAC employee first denied that the credited account was hers. But she later told the newspaper, after the account number was read to her, that it "sounded familiar" and could be hers. She was unwilling to produce a utility bill to compare account numbers.

Smith, asked whether she was aware of money credited to her account, replied: "I'm not going to answer. I can't explain it."

"If it was done, I wouldn't have said anything. They (DCCAC) owe me enough money to cover all of that. I've never done anything wrong or that I'm ashamed of."

She said when she was laid off in November, DCCAC Acting Director Mary Baines told her she probably would not be rehired.

"I didn't appeal because Mary Baines said they had been checking energy . . . (programs and) I wouldn't . . . be able to come back because of some allegations," Smith said. "I said, 'If I'm guilty of anything, I'm no guiltier than anyone else.'"

Yvonne Ewell, president of the DCCAC board, did not immediately return phone calls from the Associated Press on Monday.

The Texas Department of Community Affairs, which awards and monitors federal and state grants, social service agencies, said payments to Smith's utility account would violate rules governing energy assistance program.

"From our standpoint, it's a use of funds, and therefore it would be a disallowed cost and the (DCCAC) would owe us this money back," said Larry Crumpton, deputy director of the department.

Crumpton said department investigators in September turned over records of the utility assistance and other programs to the attorney general's office "with the assumption that some criminal prosecution would be evaluated."

DCCAC records on file with Garland Power & Light, obtained by newspaper, show the utility account of Smith received DCCAC funds totaling $2,150 in eight payments between 1985 and 1987.

Beating, videotape livens up primaries for four candidates

EL PASO (AP) — A beating and a roasting are livening up two primary races in El Paso.

Robert McCluskey, running for state representative in the 71st District, has said he is mystified at a beating he received last week because the assailant did not take the $200 in McCluskey's wallet.

And 41st District Judge John McKellips, stung by a farcical videotape produced by the El Paso Bar Association and shown at the bar's annual banquet, has produced radio advertisements that imply his opponent had more to do with the tape than she really did.

McCluskey told police he was beaten with a baseball bat or pipe outside his northeast El Paso apartment shortly before midnight last Thursday.

He was treated for cuts to the head at Hotel Dieu Hospital and released, police said.

"I didn't see anything," McCluskey told KTSM-AM. "I tell you what's funny. They didn't take my wallet, and I had $200 in my wallet."

McCluskey said he didn't think his opponent would have him beaten, but then added: "I guess it leaves that question mark since nobody took any money."

McCluskey's only opponent in the Democratic primary, Jim Allen, scoffed at McCluskey's implication.

"We certainly had nothing to do with anything like that," he said. "I don't want to make any comments on Mr. McCluskey's personal lifestyle."

Allen characterized McCluskey's statements as "a last-ditch attempt to get some attention."

"I was hoping this campaign wouldn't get so low," Allen said. "I'm very disappointed that we're down to this."

McCluskey did not return repeated calls Monday from the Associated Press.

The bar association's video roasting of McKellips poked fun at his personal life, which has been characterized by six marriages.

Depositors file suit to recover losses from uninsured S&L

HARLINGEN (AP) — Depositors of the state's only uninsured savings and loan voted Monday to file a lawsuit against a Houston-based thrift they claim defrauded the failed Rio Grande Savings & Loan.

More than 1,000 depositors met at Harlingen's Municipal Auditorium and voted overwhelmingly in favor of proceeding with a lawsuit in an attempt to recover some of their assets and damages from Houston-based Champion Savings Association, formerly First Savings Association of Orange.

Officials at Champion could not be reached for comment Monday.

About $75 million in deposits has been frozen since last May 12, when the state took over Rio Grande. Many of the 6,249 depositors are retired people who had their life savings in uninsured accounts.

Their lawsuit against the Houston thrift would seek about $18 million of those assets.

Rio Grande was the only thrift in Texas not covered by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which insures accounts up to $100,000.

proved most of the revisions in the 1988-89 University Regulations, but sent back to committee a section that proposed an extension of the Q-drop deadline for undergraduate and graduate students.

Also, an emergency resolution was distributed before the meeting that "expresses deep regret" that women and ethnic members are not represented on the Presidential Search Advisory Committee and urges President Frank E. Vandiver to "use all influence available to him to effect a remedy for this unfortunate omission."

Due to time constraints, however, the emergency resolution never came up for discussion.

Mexico's plan, he said, does not include a "generalized control of prices and salaries" such as other countries have imposed.
