

Student Body President

Brian Banner Speech Communication

Howdy! My name is Brian Banner and I am seeking the office of student body president. I am a junior speech communications major from Hurst, Texas, currently serving as your executive vice president for administration. I also served as a student body vice president last year as well as numerous other leadership capacities inside and outside of Student Government. My platform is simple. It is one of executive experience and desire to keep improving student life at Texas A&M. Student Government is headed in the right direction. My major concern is to protect the students needs and interest. Issues such as Rudder Tower being turned into a faculty club without consulting students and the seeming unbending stance of the Faculty Senate towards the senior finals issue shows that there is still a much greater need for communication, cooperation and student input. My only promise is one of hard work, dedication and leadership to the students of Texas A&M. An ultimate goal is to insure that you and I leave the University with a quality education and a bright future. Texas A&M has become a very important part of my life. My blood bleeds maroon. I hope to have the opportunity to keep improving the greatest University in the world! You can give me that opportunity if you will "Back Banner" at the polls March 30.

Jay Hays Agricultural Education

Because many important Aggie traditions have come under fire this year, the vote you cast for student body president means more than ever. Students can no longer enjoy the view of campus from the top of the Rudder Tower and senior finals issues remain unresolved. Texas A&M needs a student body president with experience.

As speaker of the Student Senate, I have already worked extensively with students, faculty, administration and the Board of Regents to ensure that student's voices are heard on the issues of senior finals, parking space allocations and the quality of undergraduate instruction.

When times are tough, Aggies pull together. Sure we face some tough issues, but with your help, as your next student body president, I will work to bring together all students so that the administration hears a strong, unified student voice.

