Weather Watch

Key:

- ⚡ - Lightning
- ☁ - Fog
- ⚡☁ - Thunderstorms
- ☔ - Rain
- ❄ - Snow
- ☂ - Drizzle
- ⚠ - Ice Pellets
- ☔☁ - Rain Shower

Sunset Today: 6:41 p.m.

Sunrise Wednesday: 6:16 a.m.

Map Discussion: A major trough of low pressure over the Rockies and associated surface front from the Great Lakes to Southern Texas will produce showers and thunderstorms, some of which will reach severe limits. The front is slowing as it encounters a blocking ridge of high pressure off the East Coast. The Pacific front in the Northwest will produce showers and snow showers. The upper trough will remain west of Bryan-College Station through Thursday; thus, expect continued mostly cloudy and warm with a chance of showers.

Forecast:

Today, Tonight, and Wednesday: Mostly cloudy, warm, and windy with a threat of showers and/or thundershowers throughout the period. High near 80. Low 64. Probability of precipitation 30 percent.

Weather Fact: Mare's Tails - Long, well defined wisps of cirrus cloud.

AIDS dispute causes musicians to walk out

HOUSTON (AP) — A controversy over an AIDS-infected musician with tuberculosis who was kept away from a Palm Sunday church performance has widened to include musicians, activists and the church.

Because of the dispute, about 15 musicians scheduled to perform Brahms' "Requiem" Sunday night at the Second Baptist Church boycotted the performance.

The remaining members of the 30-member orchestra performed as scheduled before the 1,500-person congregation.

The decision to exclude the musician stemmed from the tuberculosis, which church music minister Gary Moore said could have been spread through saliva from the player's horn. AIDS is not believed to be spread through casual contact.

"It was a health concern, not an AIDS issue," church spokesman Duncan Dodds said. "We have two or three (church) members who have AIDS... although we don't agree with their lifestyle.

"Gary is concerned because tuberculosis in general is contagious."

Moore said the AIDS victim, a French horn player, agreed to the exclusion Thursday. Initially, Moore was told by a congregation member who booked the orchestra that the AIDS victim was hospitalized with tuberculosis and would not be able to play, Dodds said.

Sunday's walkout began when about 10 musicians left an afternoon rehearsal in protest, and another five left during a later break in the rehearsal. All were members of the American Federation of Musicians.

"I tried to do my job professionally, but I felt horrible," one unidentified union member told The Houston Post. "I couldn't stay."

Ray Hill, a Houston gay activist, said he planned a "measured response" to the action next Sunday by bringing a group of AIDS victims and others with symptoms associated with AIDS to the service.
