King's followers vow to continue civil rights fight

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Followers of Martin Luther King Jr. marched Monday to the motel where he was assassinated 20 years ago and promised to keep fighting to reach his "promised land" by calling attention to the plight of the poor.

"Until we wipe out poverty in the ghetto, nowhere can be safe. Nowhere can be secure, for one hungry person speaks in misery to everybody," said Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, a civil rights organization founded by King.

"There ain't going to be no peace in the suburbs until there is justice in the ghetto," Lowery told about 3,000 people who marched a mile and a half through downtown Memphis to The Lorraine Motel.

King was assassinated on April 4, 1968, while in Memphis to support a strike by city sanitation workers. He also was conducting a nationwide campaign to draw attention to poverty.

Fifty members of Lowery's organization were scheduled to leave from the motel Monday on a combination march and motorcade through Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia, but the "poor people's pilgrimage" was delayed a day because two mules did not arrive on time.

The mules are a symbol of poverty, Lowery said, and a wagon they were to pull is similar to one used for King's funeral in Atlanta.

The Lorraine itself has become something of a symbol of poverty. At one time, the motel had about 60 rooms, but the decaying two-story building had only 12 rooms in use when the state closed it in January to make way for a museum. Opponents of the museum project, say the money should be spent turning The Lorraine into housing for the homeless.

Swaggart speaks amid controversy over punishment

BATON ROUGE (AP) — National leaders of the Assemblies of God took no action Monday regarding Jimmy Swaggart, following the evangelist's most emotional church speech since stepping down from the pulpit Feb. 21, a denomination spokesman said.

Swaggart received a favorable response Sunday night from the crowd at his Family Worship Center, but officials of the Assemblies of God said his appearances during Easter services would have violated the terms of a one-year ban on preaching it ordered last week.

Taking the microphone briefly during Sunday night's service, Swaggart paced like a cat and shouted into the microphone.

"It works! It works!" he said, shaking a Bible. "If there is a reporter here, spread the word everywhere. It works!"

The Rev. Everett Stenhouse, assistant general superintendent for the Assemblies of God, said Swaggart's appearance would have violated the one-year ban.

But because Swaggart has not signed any agreement, he has not submitted to the church's rehabilitation program.

The church's General Presbytery last Tuesday banned Swaggart from the pulpit for at least a year for "moral failure." A self-described prostitute has said Swaggart paid her to pose nude for him.

Troops look for missing coup leader

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Troops raided the seaside vacation house of opposition Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile on Sunday but failed to find the leader of an August coup attempt who fled his prison ship, military officials said.

A Manila paper, meanwhile, reported that nine other officers believed to be involved in past coup attempts had fled a detention center on Saturday. The report could not be confirmed.

The raid on Enrile's house in Batangas province, southwest of Manila, was part of an nationwide search for former Lt. Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan, leader of the Aug. 28 coup attempt that nearly toppled the Aquino administration, military officials said. Honasan, 39, escaped from a prison ship before dawn Saturday with 14 elite navy personnel who were supposed to be guarding him. He had been confined there since his arrest Dec. 9 for the attempted coup that left at least 100 people dead and hundreds wounded.

President Corazon Aquino who had refused to grant amnesty to Honasan, warned officers and civilians not to aid charismatic former colonel, who is popular among many of the 160,000-member armed forces.

Troops kill Palestinian during protest

ARRUB, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Israeli soldiers shot a Palestinian dead and wounded eight on Monday, a day of strike and protest in the occupied lands against the peace mission by Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

A Palestinian died in the Gaza Strip of wounds suffered last week.

At least 138 Arabs have been killed since violence began Dec. 8 in the West Bank and Gaza, according to U.N. figures. An Israeli soldier also has died.

Talks between Shultz and Israeli leaders focused on the U.S. proposal for Palestinian self-rule rather than how to arrange an international conference.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir opposes such a forum, but Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said "The international conference is just a door that will be opened. Peres, the prime minister's political rival and partner in the coalition government, supported the conference.

He told reporters in Jerusalem "The question is what are we going to discuss after it (the conference) is opened. Maybe more we go into details, but threatening it will be for Shamir. Shamir says Israel would outnumbered at such a conference and risk having demands imposed upon it.

U.S. households contain fewer people

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has more than 90 million households for the first time, but each contains fewer people than ever, the Census Bureau reported Monday.

The 90,031,000 households in the United States averaged 2.64 members each as of last July 1.

"The reason is, in effect, changes in the age structure," said Campbell Gibson, a population specialist for the bureau.

Most Americans born in the post-World War II Baby Boom are now in their 20s and 30s, ages during which they are most likely to set up households on their own, he said.

The fact that many are doing so boosted the number of households from 80.4 million in 1980 to 88.8 million in 1986 and to the 90 million mark last summer.

At the same time, the average number of people per household declined from 2.75 in 1980 to 2.65 in 1986 and then to 2.64.

By comparison, the 1970 census found the average household contained 3.14 people. Households averaged more than 3 people in 1930 and more than five in 1880.

The growing number of smaller households continues a trend, but Gibson pointed out that household growth is outpacing population increases as in the 1970s.

The same age factors that are increasing the number of households also occurred then, he said.
