Lyric Arts Festival brings 4 concerts to A&M this month

By Staci Finch
Staff Writer

The music scene in College Station will move up a step on the cultural ladder this month when the Houston Lyric Arts Festival.

Working with the School of Music at the University of Houston and Houston's Museum of Fine Arts, the College presented the first of four chamber concerts last night. Future concerts will be presented on June 13, 20, and 27.

Each of the four concerts features different composers, and the variety of musical themes are reflected in the titles. The June 13 performance, "Twentieth-Century American Pioneers," includes works by George Gershwin and composer Lou Harrison, who will be on hand to present some of his works and give some history of the American pioneers. Later concerts are titled "International Cross-Currents: Homage to the Cello" and "Quartet Canada: International and Contemporary Experiences."

Concert themes are coordinated with exhibits in the Houston Lyric Arts Museum, said Paul Parrish, associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

Parrish said the concert series grew out of several discussions of the museum and the UH School of Music.

"We are working to further develop our music program here," said Parrish. "We have been discussing bringing this series to College Station for a long time, and it is part of an ongoing relationship with the University of Houston's School of Music."

Concerts will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Rudder Forum, and will be followed by receptions. Tickets are available in the MSC Box Office.

Officials struggle to help deaf boy find home, family

EL PASO (AP) — A hearing-impaired boy may have added another piece to the puzzle of his identity Monday by repeatedly pointing to a puzzle piece corresponding to the state of Oklahoma, officials said.

Law authorities also were checking into whether the boy, who is believed to be from the United States and was found wandering in a Mexican border town last year, is from Illinois.

The boy — nicknamed Sabat by child protection workers caring for him in Juarez, Mexico — has a fondness for American food and cartoon characters and is familiar with U.S. currency.

The boy has scars on his left knee, abdomen and back that seem to be two or three years old, and he has repeatedly sketched an airplane crash in attempts to communicate. Authorities believe the sketches may mean the boy was the only member of his family to survive a plane crash.

He is called Sabat because he was found on a Saturday, or "sabado" in Spanish. He bears some resemblance to a 4-year-old who disappeared from Decatur, Ill., in October 1985, officials said.

The Center for Missing and Exploited Children in Washington, D.C., provided a description of the missing boy, named T.J. Davison, and was forwarding copies of Davison's fingerprints and footprints, Terry Kincaid, spokesman for the El Paso FBI office, said.

Sgt. John Mickler of the Decatur police department said Monday he doubts Sabat is Davison, but hasn't given up hope.

Pat Ayala, spokesman for the state Department of Human Services, said that newspapers and television stations from numerous cities around the state and nation have taken interest in Sabat.

A visit by an NBC television crew over the weekend yielded a possible clue as to where the child is from. Reporters and child protection workers disassembled a wooden puzzle of the United States and laid out the 50 pieces corresponding to the states.

"He kept pointing to Oklahoma," Ayala said Monday. "He had drawn a picture of a house — a two-story house. He kept pointing to the house and we had the states lined up and he kept pointing to that particular one (Oklahoma)."

Even when a social worker covered the puzzle piece corresponding to Oklahoma, the boy insisted on looking for the missing state, she said.

Kincaid said he has gotten reports about missing children from Oklahoma, but that the office has received dozens of telephone calls from across the nation from people eager to help solve the mystery of Sabat's origins.

Ayala said the boy has a twin, a whisper to Juanita McCray, a community liaison with the Department of Human Services, but that the sounds he makes are unintelligible. McCray said Sabat's actions could indicate he lost his hearing in an accident.

"I don't think a child that could speak would try to whisper," she said Sunday.

Pictures Sabat has drawn seem to indicate he was brought up in a mountainous area with knee-deep snow. Authorities believed the child might have matched the description of one kidnapped a couple of years ago in Alaska, but that boy was never recovered over the weekend, Ayala said.

Both Juarez and El Paso child welfare employees are working together to help solve the case, officials said.

The cooperation is the result of an agreement the two agencies signed last February in which they pledged to help each other in cases like Sabat's.

Texaco Inc. sells subsidiary to Germans

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. announced Monday that it had agreed to sell its West German subsidiary to Rheinisch-Westfälische Elektrizitätswerk AG, the country's largest utility company, for a price of more than $1.2 billion.

At its headquarters in Essen, Germany, the firm, also known as RWE, said it would pay $1.23 billion for Texaco's 99.12 percent interest in Deutsche Texaco AG, completed the first major part of a $5 billion restructuring plan by the White Plains, N.Y., based oil giant.

The deal, signed in Luxembourg, was subject to approval by the West German Federal Cartel Office, but both sides said they expected to encounter no difficulties.

Negotiations leading to the deal had been going on for months. Texaco immersed itself in plans to restructure following its April emergence from Chapter 11 Bankruptcy Court protection.
