Victim's son files lawsuit over mauling

HOUSTON (AP) — The son of a Houston zoo keeper mauled to death by a tiger last month filed a $6 million lawsuit Thursday alleging the city ignored safety problems that led to the death.

"The city in this case was grossly negligent," said Fred Hofheinz, attorney for Jack Tovar. "The city owes this man some money, and we're going to get it."

Tovar, 35, of San Antonio, is the only child of Ricardo Tovar, 58, who was killed May 12 at the Houston Zoo as he was performing his morning duties caring for the tigers. A Siberian tiger broke through a glass security window, dragged the zoo keeper into the exhibit and mauled him, crushing his chest and breaking his neck.

Named as defendants were the city, Mayor Kathy Whitmire, Parks Department Director Donald Olson and Houston Zoo Director John Werler, as well as CRS Serrine Inc., the firm that designed the large cat exhibit and W.J. Hessert Construction Co. Inc., which built it.

Tovar's lawsuit claims the city and other parties were "grossly negligent" in his father's death in several respects.

After zoo employees arrived at the scene, they refused to shoot the tiger even when the animal attacked the zoo keeper again as he lay in the exhibit.

The window the tiger broke was made of thin glass that was not standard in most zoos, where specially strengthened glass or plastic commonly are used.

Tovar was required to work alone around dangerous animals because of staff shortages.

City officials, specifically Whitmire, Olson and Werler, supported cost-cutting measures at the zoo even though the cuts were known to be imprudent and resulted in unsafe conditions.

Inhaled correction fluid kills Round Rock teen

ROUND ROCK (AP) — A teenager has died as a result of inhaling typewriter correction fluid, a dangerous practice that is growing in popularity as a way to get a "cheap high," authorities said.

Austin police officer Robert Martinez said he has confiscated correction fluid from about 30 youths so far this year. He seized most of the fluid after confronting gangs of youths late at night.

In Round Rock, Armando Valadez, 17, died early Wednesday, Justice of the Peace Jennifer Mattingly said. The death was ruled accidental. Assistant Police Chief Raymond Kuhlman said Valadez had been inhaling typewriter correction fluid "for quite a lengthy time."

Travis County Medical Examiner Robert Bayardo, who performed the autopsy, said the cause of death was intoxication from volatile substances. The fluid causes brain, respiratory and cardiac damage.

Officers found numerous correction fluid containers near the victim's body, Kuhlman said.

Austin Police Sgt. Duane Miller of the youth services division said halant sniffing is a "hidden crime." Although it is a Class B misdemeanor, juvenile abusers are not treated as criminals as a matter of policy.

David Fausch, a vice president of the Gillette Co., in Boston, a firm that manufactures and markets several brands of correction fluid, said his company voluntarily has taken steps to prevent abuse of the product.

A squirrel attempts to go under cover to attack an unsuspecting passerby.

AUSTIN (AP) — Students attending summer session at the University of Texas in Austin have more than grades to worry about. An increase in the squirrel population on the 40-acre campus has become cause for concern, officials said Wednesday. Authorities believe the extra squirrel activity may be due to the mating season.

UT Health Center spokesman Valerie Cox said an average of two squirrel attacks a week are being reported. But she said some attacks have happened while students were feeding the animals, and the critters bit the human hands.

UT officials say at least 5,000 comes naturally — collecting nuts.

This article just proves that that Texas A&M offers a better opportunity than UT for all living creatures to obtain a proper education — our squirrels have learned not to bite the hand that feeds them.
