Red Cross boosts volunteer staffing

DALLAS (AP) — The American Red Cross, remembering the tornado last year that killed 37 people and injured more than 110 in a West Texas city, is preparing for another natural disaster by boosting its volunteer staff to 1,400.

"We were frightened," Gail Barron, spokesman for the Dallas chapter of the Red Cross, said of the Saragosa twister. "If a tornado came into our area, we would be understaffed."

So, instead of waiting for another calamity, the chapter has launched a recruitment drive to quadruple its volunteer ranks.

The chapter has about 350 volunteers on call during disasters to run emergency shelters, operate food trucks and kitchens, counsel victims, assess property damage and perform other duties.

That number is 1,050 volunteers short of what the organization is shooting for in the recruitment drive.

Red Cross officials told the Dallas Times Herald Sunday they determined the need for 1,400 by multiplying the number of people needed to operate a shelter during a less serious emergency by the number of shelters needed in a catastrophe.

"We are not in a crisis," Dan Wagner, director of the chapter's disaster services, said. "We just want to feel that we have enough volunteers to handle a crisis."

The closest the chapter has come to a crisis was last February when a fire in Oaklawn burned down 48 units of an apartment complex, leaving 140 people homeless.

Wagner said volunteers — mostly retired people, homemakers and business owners — helped victims find food and shelter, distributed blankets and later replace clothes, furniture and other things.

Janice Gardner, a bank teller who volunteers as a cook with the Red Cross, said she gets personal satisfaction out of helping others in sticky situations.

Gardner, who grew up in a poor neighborhood in New York City's Harlem, knows what it's like to not have all the necessities in life.

"I get a natural high knowing I can do something to help someone else," she said.
