Committee favors extended Medicaid

AUSTIN (AP) — Members of a special Senate committee Monday endorsed a proposal to use surplus human services money to provide Medicaid benefits to about 69,000 more poor children and pregnant women.

Members also supported a proposal to extend Medicaid nursing home care to about 4,900 more people by raising the monthly income limit.

"It's apparent to me that the evidence supporting the need for these programs is irrefutable," said Sen. Hugh Farmer, D-Fort Worth, chairman of the Special Senate Interim Committee on Workfare.

"All the available evidence points to one clear and compelling fact: Texas does a very poor job of providing even basic assistance to the most fragile groups in society — women, children and the elderly," Farmer said.

Four of the eight committee members were present and gave their support for the proposals. Farmer, who planned to communicate the committee's support to the department, said he might do so with a letter that could be signed by additional senators.

The Board of Human Services in May delayed action on extending Medicaid benefits after Gov. Bill Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis wrote and asked for more time to consider the expansion. The board is scheduled to consider welfare expansion proposals July 7.

Brian Packard, assistant human services commissioner, said the surplus, in part, resulted because the cost per recipient for hospital and physician services was less than expected and federal medical assistance matching funds were higher than expected.

One proposal, costing $48.2 million in state money, would allow pregnant women and young children with family incomes at or below the federal poverty level to qualify for Medicaid benefits. Currently, those at or below 34 percent of the poverty level qualify for the benefits in Texas.

Texas alcohol agents plan raids on parties at apartment's pools

FORT WORTH (AP) — State liquor agents plan to raid parties at apartment complex swimming pools to enforce state laws forbidding consumption of alcoholic beverages by people under 21, officials said.

Within the past year, liquor agents have issued more than 200 citations to minors who violated Texas state liquor laws, Virgil Stephens, supervisor of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission office in Fort Worth, said.

Agents raid between 25 and 50 parties a summer, Stephens told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"Spring and summer is generally the worst time," he said. "It's pool-party time."

Liquor agents issue citations to minors caught drinking alcohol and the apartment managers who served it to them, Stephens said.

People under 21 caught drinking face fines of $25 to $200 for a first offense and $25 to $500 for a second.

Complex managers who sell alcohol to minors face fines of $100 to $1000 along with a one-year jail term. Making alcohol available to minors can result in fines of $25 to $500.

Drug dealer's fortune gets auctioned

HOUSTON (AP) — Trendy Hart Galleries, more accustomed to handling auctions of antiques and art objects of Houston blue bloods, is expecting hundreds of bidders this week for $2 million worth of jewelry and other goods seized by federal authorities from a convicted Florida drug dealer.

"I doubt anyone ever seized jewelry of this quality in this amount," J. Keith Gary, U.S. Marshal for the Eastern District of Texas, said Monday of the nearly 200 items that once belonged to Bruce Emery "Pee Wee" Griffin. Gary described Griffin as a Florida drug dealer who used a ranch in Aubrey — north of Dallas — to launder drug money.

Griffin, convicted of marijuana possession, is now on parole from prison.

The items on display at the Hart Galleries, which earlier this year handled the bankruptcy auction of former Texas Gov. John Connally, offer a glimpse of the wealth amassed by people like Griffin, who told authorities he was making $20 million to $25 million a year.

Included are such things as gold-plated and monogrammed tape measures, a gold toothpick that slides out of its own gold holder, and a gold cocaine spoon.

A showpiece item is an 18-karat gold ring embellished with a 9.49-carat emerald-cut diamond surrounded by 56 other diamonds. The ring is estimated to be worth $130,000.

"You've got to understand this man had just a tremendous amount of money and he could buy whatever he saw," Jerry Hart, owner of the gallery, said. "It appears he was very selective about what he purchased. He bought nothing but investment quality stones and diamonds."

Other jewelry includes gold dice with diamonds marking the spots, loose diamonds and emeralds — many of them authenticated with certificates from the Gemological Institute of America — and dozens of gold rings, chains and bracelets, some carrying Griffin's initials "BEG" or the name "Bruce" spelled out in diamonds. There's also an emerald necklace with the gems in the shape of marijuana leaves.

Money raised from the auction will go to a federal fund to combat dealers of illegal drugs, Gary said.

Federal agents who raided Griffin's Ranch also found nine gold bars worth $18 million in the trunk of a Mercedes parked there, but two of the bars have been sold to a small Amarillo with the proceeds also being sent to the government, he said.

Also in the auction are $500 and $1000 nomination bills and rare currency of small denominations.

"Because some guy got caught dealing, doesn't mean anything to me," said Ernest, a Houston collector who was among dozens of people getting their first look at the items Monday. He wants a $500 bill.

"I would buy one just because you can't get the bank and get one," he said.

Hart is expecting 500 bidders for the auction scheduled for Wednesday.

Hospital releases slashed 3-year-old

HOUSTON (AP) — Three-year-old Twigg Mottley, recovering from knife wounds that left her throat slashed and thumb nearly severed, is back home in the house where she was attacked and her mother killed.

"She was laughing," Alicia Lucky, the infant's cousin, said after the child was released from the hospital Sunday. "But she kept asking about her mama. And I couldn't say anything. I handed her back to her aunt, and I went to crying. She's aware her mother's dead, but nobody's really told her. They don't know how."

A man wielding a butcher knife wounded her and threw her in a closet and also stabbed her mother to death in the attack Friday.

Curtis Butler O'Brien, 30, whom the children knew as "Pluto," surrendered to police about 10 hours after the killing and was jailed on charges of murdering Lottie Mae Nora and attempting to murder

"Twigg," whose given name is Quarshon Ophelia Mottley.

Twigg's throat was slashed along with the thumb nearly severed, when she raised her hand to shield herself from the knife.

The child still fears the man who came through the window with the knife.

The family said O'Brien lived the house with Nora and her children until about a month ago. Nora had to break down the door of a crack house to retrieve her daughters.

Then, said Damon Mottley, 11-year-old son, O'Brien and a few belongings were tossed from the yard.

Family members said the woman life with O'Brien was filled with arguments, largely over money but sometimes over jealousy. Still, she stayed with him for years.
