Unknown man kills 9, wounds 53 tourists aboard Greek cruise ship

PIRAEUS, Greece (AP) — A man sprayed automatic gunfire on hundreds of tourists aboard a cruise ship and hurled a hand grenade at the liner's smoke stack, killing at least nine people and wounding 53, police said. The gunman escaped on a waiting yacht.

Earlier Monday, an explosion killed two people and destroyed a car parked near a marina where the cruise ship, the City of Poros, was to dock in the Athens seaside suburb of Paleo Faliron. Police speculated the car blast and the shipboard attack were connected.

Police said 15 of the 53 injured were in serious condition. They said three people died from bullet wounds in Piraeus hospitals and six others were found dead on the deck of the cruise ship. At least three of the dead were foreigners.

Many of the 570 passengers on the City of Poros were European tourists, from Sweden, Britain, Italy, France and Denmark, authorities said.

The attack occurred at 8:40 p.m. as the City of Poros, on a one-day cruise, left the island of Aegina in the Saronic Gulf to head back to a small marina in Paleo Faliron, port police said.

Passengers Jean Wogewda of Lorient, France, and his wife Natalie, were both wounded by the gunman. Wogewda was shot in both legs but still managed to crawl away.

"I was on deck when I heard automatic fire, and I turned around and was thrown into the air by the impact of the bullets hitting my legs," Wogewda said as he lay in a Piraeus hospital.

Wogewda said panic set in as many passengers scattered for cover. Others grabbed life jackets and jumped over the railing into the water.

In the confusion, the gunman boarded a small yacht that pulled alongside the liner and sped away, police said.

Attorneys question safety of structure at Comanche Peak

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two attorneys representing a whistleblower who has questioned the structural safety of Comanche Peak protested Monday a settlement that would end licensing hearings for the nuclear power plant south of Fort Worth.

But an attorney for 10 other whistleblowers who agreed to an unprecedented settlement between the Citizens Association for Sound Energy (CASE), the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and TU Electric questioned the validity of the men's claims and defended the agreement reached last week as a "win-win negotiation."

"These guys are labor lawyers, not licensing lawyers, and they don't know what their rights are," CASE attorney Anthony Roisman said.

The Kohns are fighting a portion of the settlement that would dissolve the U.S. Atomic Safety and Licensing Board and are demanding the entire settlement be made public. Portions of the agreement regarding financial compensation have not been made public. They are seeking a 60-day stay of the dissolution.

They contend the board's dissolution would lead to the quick licensing of the plant, which its owner, TU Electric, now projects will be ready for operation in early 1990 at a cost approaching $10 billion.

A meeting is scheduled Wednesday in Dallas on whether to disband the licensing board and to remove CASE as the last legal intervenor.

The Kohns believe their "John Doe" whistleblower will not get a fair hearing from the NRC once the atomic safety panel is disbanded.

But Roisman said that is not the case, pointing out that under the settlement, CASE president Juanita Ellis will have oversight authority as an equal member of TU Electric operations review committee. The committee is charged with overseeing all corrective action and repairs for the plant to comply with nuclear safety law.

Helicopter mission for inmates fails

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A helicopter plucked two convicted murderers and a thief from a state prison yard under fire from guards Monday, but the chopper was forced down and those aboard were captured after an 80-mile aerial chase, officials said.

The helicopter flew into the Penitentiary of New Mexico about 9:50 a.m. and picked up the three inmates, said Don Caviness, a spokesman for the New Mexico Corrections Department.

It flew to Los Lunas, about 80 miles south of here, where it unloaded two of the inmates and took off again, said Ronni Crago, spokesman for the Bernalillo County sheriff's department.

One of the inmates was wounded and captured in a gun battle at Mid-Valley Airport in Los Lunas, but the other fled on foot and was being hunted, Crago said.

Court rules stamps didn't violate law

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — There's no point in deciding whether special stamp cancellations during Pope John Paul II's visit violated the separation of church and state, a federal appeals court ruled Monday.

"Because the pope's 1987 visit is history and no other visits are planned, the appellants can escape mootness only by showing that the Postal Service's action is 'capable of repetition, yet evading review,'" the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said.

The ruling upheld a decision in Texas against a suit filed against the San Antonio postmaster by some residents and business men in the San Antonio area.

The suit filed claimed the cancellations marked a religious event, thereby supporting Roman Catholicism in violation of the First Amendment to the Constitution.

The district court denied the request for an injunction, saying that only about 10,000 stamps were likely to get the papal cancellation.
