Survey: Seatbelt use jumps up to 60 percent in Texas

By Kelly Chapman
Reporter

Six out of 10 Texans have added a step to their driving routine by buckling up when getting behind the wheel, a recent survey revealed.

The Texas Transportation Institute for the highway department reported an increase in safety-belt usage within the past six months. The institute conducted a survey of 18 cities and found an increase from 54.1 percent in January to 59.2 in June, a gain of 5.1 percent.

A law mandating seat-belt use took effect Sept. 1, 1985, but tickets were not issued until Jan. 1, 1986, said Gary Trietsch, safety and traffic operations engineer with the highway department.

After the law went into effect, seat-belt usage averaged 66.1 percent but dropped to 55.7 percent by January of this year. Over the past six months the average has increased to 60.6 percent, a 4.9 percent rise.

"We attribute much of the rise to stronger law enforcement efforts," Trietsch said. "Without police there writing tickets, some people just won't take the time to buckle up."

"We're very encouraged by the increase in safety-belt use. Public education is important in getting people to understand why they should use seat belts, but it seems some people have to believe they really might get a ticket before they'll change their behavior."

The city showing the highest usage rate was Corpus Christi with 83.3 percent, followed by Austin with a rate of 72.5 percent. However, Laredo showed the highest increase in percentage of seat-belt use between January and June with an increase of 17.7 percent.

El Paso was next with a 17-point rise, followed by Tyler with a 14.3 percent increase.

AIDS victim sues lawfirm for prejudice

AUSTIN (AP) — In the first case of its kind in Austin, a man with AIDS has sued one of the city's largest law firms, alleging job discrimination.

Gilbert R. Nieto filed suit in state District Court against the law firm of Clark, Thomas, Winters & Newton, contending that the firm discriminated against him by firing him after he was diagnosed with AIDS-related complex in August 1987.

Barry Bishop, a partner with Clark, Thomas, Winters & Newton, denied that Nieto was fired because of his disease.

Unhappy customer points rifle at stylist

AZLE (AP) — A woman who hated her short-in-front, long-in-back haircut returned to the salon with a refund demand and a rifle.

The unsatisfied customer then drove off in her battered orange pickup truck, and Parker County deputies were having trouble finding her.

"They (deputies) said, 'You wouldn't believe the number of orange pickup trucks in Azle and Springtown,'" said Melinda Freeman, owner of The Hair and Tanning Salon between Azle and Springtown, just northwest of Fort Worth.

Freeman said the woman had visited the salon once before, and came back Saturday to ask that she be given a haircutting attempt. "She said she could have her hair cut but not women's hair," Freeman recalled Monday.

Displeased with the repair job, the unidentified woman returned Monday morning and got what she said was for — a cut that was "short up the long in the back," the beautician said.

The customer, still dissatisfied, became outraged when her demand for an $8 refund was rejected.

"That's when she pulled the rifle out," Freeman said.
