HOW TO ENRICH YOUR EDUCATION BY $1,100 A MONTH.

If you're a math, engineering or physical sciences major, you could be earning $1,100 a month during your junior and senior years.

This excellent opportunity is part of the Navy Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate Program. It's one of the most prestigious ways of entering the nuclear field and rewarding, too. You get a $4,000 bonus upon entrance into the program, and $2,000 more when you complete your Naval studies.

You also receive a year of paid graduate-level training that's the most comprehensive in the world.

And you'll acquire expertise with state-of-the-art nuclear reactor and propulsion plant technology.

As a Navy officer, you'll lead the adventure while gaining high-level experience that will help make you a leader in one of the world's high-tech industries.

In addition to the professional advantages, nuclear-trained officers get an unbeatable benefits package, travel opportunities, promotions and a solid salary.

Find out more about the Navy Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate Program, and make your education start paying off today.

Stop by and talk with your Navy representative at the Engineering Fair Sept. 14 and 15 or call us at 822-3423.

Academics, business meet at Research Park

By Susan B. Erb
 Reporter

Nestled in the tranquil Texas countryside, surrounded by grazing cattle and peaceful streams, geneticists splice genes and transfer embryos while ocean geologists piece together the giant jigsaw puzzle of Earth's drifting continents.

Texas A&M University Research Park — 434 acres of landscaped grounds on the west side of the A&M campus — provides the breeding ground for these research partnerships between private-sector industry and academia.

The Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) National Training Center, the next Research

Park tenant, after it relocates its facility next April from Fort Worth to a $3 million, 35,000-square-foot facility on a six-acre site.

Dr. Walter F. Juliff, director of Veterinary Professional Development and project manager for the contracting of the FSIS training program, said the facility will cater to the training of red meat and poultry inspectors and to veterinarians.

"Approximately 1,200 food inspectors and 400 veterinarians will go through the training center annually," Juliff said. "Over a year's time, we expect a total of 3,000 students, which means some will come more than once."

FSIS will join Granada Genetics, the Ocean Drilling Program and Biophor Corporation as

Texas A&M pioneers of the research park concept.

Modeled after the theory introduced by the Stanford Industrial Park in 1951 — better known as Silicon Valley — the University-owned Research Park leases land to industry on a long-term basis and at an attractive price.

Dr. John B. Millohollon, assistant for Research Park Development and vice chancellor of Research Park and Corporate Relations, said A&M students benefit from the Research Park by employment opportunities with research-oriented, high-technology industries that better prepare them for life after graduation than typical student jobs.
