Tribute service for jail victim held at school

FLORIEN, La. (AP) — Family and friends of Loyal Garner Jr. gathered at a local high school auditorium for a memorial tribute to the truck driver who died of head wounds after being jailed in the Sabine County Jail.

Police Chief Duane Calhoun fought back tears Saturday as he described his friendship with Garner and he pledged to help Garner's widow and six children.

Calhoun said he knew Garner as he grew up and never saw him do anything wrong.

Garner, 34, died Dec. 27, at Tyler Medical Center after surgery for head wounds he received at the jail in Hemphill.

Former Hemphill Police Chief Thomas Ladner, 41, and sheriff's deputies Bill Horton, 58, and James "Bo" Hyden, 35, were acquitted July 15 of violating Garner's civil rights by beating him and denying him medical attention.

The 12th District Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday the trio cannot be tried for murder in Smith County because it would constitute double jeopardy trying someone twice for the same alleged offense.

Florien Mayor John Manasco said the people of Florien know a wrong has been committed, but the question is why did we permit it to happen.

"I don't agree with the courts in Texas, but someday it will be righted," Manasco said. "I knew Junior (Garner) to be honest and hard-working. He was loved by his family."

"It is incomprehensible that something like this could happen," he said.

The Rev. Ernest Charles of Houston said he has talked to many whites who feel Garner's death was racially motivated.

The three law men were white and Garner, black.

"In spite of the fact that racism exists we who are for righteousness must rise above racism," he said. "We must recognize a man for being a man, not the color of his skin, but the truth he has in his heart."

"Loyal died and he will never come back, but he died to bring us all together for a better place. If Loyal had not lost his life we would not be here today. We must stand up and say he did not die in vain," Charles said to loud applause.

The group of about 50 who attended the service contributed a total of $317 for the Garner family. The money was taken up by Florien police officers.

Conservative group attacks liberal view of Baylor alumni

DALLAS (AP) — A conservative group has launched a crusade against Baylor University trustees and its 75,000-member alumni association saying the groups have allowed the school to become too liberal.

In a four-page letter to Baylor friends and alumni, the Rev. Donny Cortimilia urged conservatives to attend the Nov. 4 Alumni Association meeting and vote to change the editorial policy of The Baylor Line, the alumni journal.

Conservatives have complained the journal does not represent their perspective.

"Some of us have the feeling Baylor is becoming more liberal in its teachings and practices than we think it should," Cortimilia, a pastor from Melissa and acting coordinator of the group United for a Better Baylor, said.

Cortimilia also encouraged attendance at the Oct. 25 meeting of the Baptist General Convention of Texas and support of the election of conservative trustees for the school.

Randy Fields, a member of the alumni association executive committee, called Cortimilia's campaign takeover attempt. Fields said the executive committee was meeting Friday to formulate a response to Cortimilia.

Cortimilia declined to name the supporters of his group. He said he is not being backed by conservative strategists Paul Pressler of Houston and the Rev. J. Patterson of Dallas. Both Pressler and Patterson urged Baylor University to become more conservative in its teachings and principles.

In May, Baylor President Herbert Reynolds was criticized by conservatives they would never gain control of the school. Reynolds published remarks in The Baylor Line saying that if fundamentalists won a majority on the school's board of trustees, he would join with the faculty in a class-action suit for control of the institution.
