Baptist groups reunite, discuss racism, school

DALLAS (AP) — Two black Baptist conventions that split 73 years ago over control of a publishing house are meeting for the first time since 1915 to condemn racism and encourage reopening of Bishop College.

The Rev. Allan Boesak, leader of the principal non-white activist organization in South Africa, will give the convention's keynote speech. "We will certainly condemn (President) P.W. Botha and the government of South Africa in no uncertain way," the Rev. Theodore Jemison of Baton Rouge, La., said during a news conference Monday. Jemison heads the National Baptist Convention, USA.

Boesak, a Dutch Reformed minister who helped found the United Democratic Front, will address the NBC and delegates from The National Black Convention of America Thursday night at Reunion Arena.

The National Baptist Convention, USA, has 7 million members. Jemison said he expects between 40,000 and 45,000 church members to attend the Dallas convocation. The National Baptist Convention of America, which has 2.5 million members, is meeting in Fort Worth. The two groups split 73 years ago over control of a publishing house.

A third group, the Progressive National Baptists, pulled out of the NBC in 1961.

"We're coming together Thursday evening so we can discuss things we can do together as Baptist people," Jemison said. "The matter of merger has not been discussed and I don't have any idea it will."

Contributions collected at the Thursday night gathering will be used to help the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Bishop College, Jemison said.

"We're going to focus on what we can do to reopen Bishop College," Jemison said. "I'm not familiar with what the courts have said and I have a lot of respect for the judicial system. But I don't know if the courts can keep it closed if we want to open it."

Bishop College, a predominantly black school in South Oak Cliff, closed last month in bankruptcy court with an estimated $20 million debt.

Neither Bush nor Dukakis formally replied to invitations to attend, but Jemison said he hopes Dukakis will appear Friday morning.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, a member of the denomination, will speak Friday night.

The denomination will not endorse either candidate, but Jemison said members will take stands on social issues such as homelessness, poverty, narcotics, teen-age pregnancy and racial polarization.

Wichitan arrested in M-16 rifle theft

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — One Wichita Falls man was arrested Tuesday morning after police raided a home and recovered 10 M-16 rifles believed to be those stolen from Fort Sill, Okla., last week.

The Wichita Falls Police Department, acting under directions from the FBI, would not release details about the arrest or about the suspect in custody.

FBI spokesman Dan Vogel of Oklahoma City said the 10 rifles were recovered from a residence about 3:30 a.m. But Vogel would not say how police learned the location of the rifles.

Eleven of the fully automatic rifles were stolen from a barracks at Fort Sill last Thursday by a man dressed in military battle dress uniform with sergeant's insignia.

The man ordered a trainee to load the rifles he was guarding into a military truck and then drove off.

The truck had been stolen from a training battery at Fort Sill about 5:30 p.m. or 6 p.m. Thursday.

A similar truck was recovered in downtown Lawton early Friday, but there were no weapons in it.

One of the rifles was recovered Friday when a soldier told authorities he bought the weapon for $100 late Thursday night in downtown Lawton.

The 11 rifles were stacked outside a barracks in the new Artillery Training Center after a group of trainees returned from an exercise.

First black Texas Ranger named

AUSTIN (AP) — Lee Roy Young Jr. received his badge and commission as the first black Texas Ranger in a Tuesday ceremony, achieving a dream that began when he was a young boy in Del Rio.

Young, 41, said his becoming the first black Ranger in the elite group's 165-year history "should serve as an indication to other minorities and other people you can have any type of dream . . . and it can become possible for you one day."

"This was a dream I had many years ago to become a Ranger, and perhaps it was an impossible dream, but today it's a reality," Young told a news conference after the ceremony conducted by Col. Joe Milner, director of the Department of Public Safety.

Young, a 14-year DPS veteran, was most recently stationed in San Antonio as an investigator with the criminal intelligence service. He is stationed in Garland as a Ranger.

"I, as a young boy growing up in Southwest Texas, read about the Rangers and saw movies and things of that type, and decided I would like to aspire to become a Ranger one day," said Young, who was born in Del Rio.

Young was among 37 people receiving promotions in the ceremony at DPS headquarters, including three promotions to Ranger.

His wife, Mary; children, Anthony and Kristen; and other family members were among those in the auditorium packed with relatives those being promoted.

A DPS officer must have at least eight years of law enforcement experience to be eligible to be a Ranger and at least 60 hours of college. The equivalent education. Appointments are made on the basis of major competitive examination and oral interviews.

Rangers are charged specifically with four duties: protection of life and property by enforcing criminal statutes; suppressing insurrections; investigating major crimes; and apprehending suspects.

The DPS has been hit by charges of racial discrimination in recent years. A black state trooper in Houston publicly voiced disappointment last year when he was not selected for the Rangers. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has charged black officers have been discriminated against.

Asked whether he believes there is racism in the agency, Young said, "That's part of our society, and course we try to do away with it. It's part of our society and we have to learn to contend with that." He said he believes his promotion was based on his skill and ability.

Young said he is quite uncomfortable about the publicity he has received since his promotion was announced.

"I don't like all the hot lights at the cameras flashing and everything," he said. "I'm really kind of quiet, mild-natured person."
