summer serving in Navy By Kathleen Reilly

While some students partied on the beach this summer, some members of the Corps of Cadets spent the summer on active duty with the Six senior cadets in the Navy College Program and on U.S. Navy scholarships traveled to points around the world, including Japan, the Philippines, Singapore and San

The cadets applied for third class Navy cruises and served as enlisted men. Each man was assigned as a first class petty officer, a cadet trained to handle the jobs his officers perform.

Every day, the cadets were drilled in simulations of almost any situation they might find themselves in during duty. Simulations included training to handle an enemy missile

The cadets performed as if the attack were real, except that they did not fire back Bob Gordon, a political science major, spent three weeks in the Caribbean on a search and seizure mission. His duties included driving the ship and looking for contacts. He had to stop the ship the first time he drove so the crew could search a small fishing boat for drugs.

Gordon's ship made 26 boardings onto suspected drug trafficking ships in three weeks. Most ships were free of drugs, he said.

One night, the Coast Guard called about a broken ship carrying 9,000 pounds of marijuana. Gordon was driving the ship when the call came

When Gordon's ship arrived, the crew of the drug boat were throwing the drugs and themselves over-

Juan M. Basombrio, a biochemistry major, went to Colombia for two months to examine its navy and learn about the culture.

Basombrio was one of fifty midshipmen to visit a foreign country this year. He was welcomed by the Admiral of the Colombian navy and given an official passport. Because of the guerrilla warfare there, Basombrio was assigned a bodyguard.

Of the 61 days he was in Colombia, he spent 20 aboard ships. He spent most of his time visiting cities and learning the about the country. He began his cultural adjustment in Bogota, the capital city.

"If war broke out, we could all be called to duty a start as officers. Even as an ensign, we are expected the know what's going on. We are expected to lead. Ins to 12 months we could be the officer of the day."

"Later, we traveled to the main port in Buenaventura," he said. "It was the poorest in South America. It was a prime example of a Third World country.

His trip was not all sightseeing, however. "I was also on an old World War II boat," Basombrio said. 'Half the ship got seasick because it rocked so much.

"It rains everyday down there, making navigation difficult. The visibility was so poor, everything was done by radar.

Cliffs, 30-35 feet high, border the entire coastline of Buenaventura, making it impossible to reach except

Basombrio was in a small boat

when a storm hit. "We were hit by waves eight feet high," he said. "Each one pushed us closer toward the cliffs, but our driver was able to steer us away.

'Another time, I was on an overloaded plane. We couldn't get up in the air and had to stop about 100 meters from the end of the runway, just short of power lines and the edge of a cliff!"

Basombrio was seen as a diplomat, and was given full access to the Colombian navy and also was allowed to visit the president's mansion.

"It was special because I was allowed inside," he said. "Not everyone gets to do that. Security was also tight because of the guerillas."

Matt Case, a marketing major, was stationed in San Diego for four weeks, where he served as an assistant communications officer under instruction. He performed the same duties as a commissioned ensign.

"The cruises we take are very motivational," Case said. "They allow us the opportunity to apply what we've learned through the Corps."

His duties included making spot checks of equipment - disassembling and cleaning it and putting the quipment back together

While the ship was under way, he stood bridge watches. As junior officer of the deck, Case had to watch for other ships and change direction when necessary to avoid collisions.

One cadet spent part of his cruise in the Persian Gulf. Scott Swords, a civil engineering major, was on a ship positioned in the mouth of the to identify planes as "friend or came pr His ship had to guide a miss stroyer through the strait under ised to re dition One Alpha. Under that to formal

Representatives: Careers for bankers look positive

By Fiona Soltes Staff Writer

Future careers in banking look positive, representatives of seven Texas banks told a group of around 100 students during Thursday's Bank Career Day.

"Looking forward, Texas will add more than 3 million jobs over the next 20 years," said Don Hawk, executive vice president of Texas Commerce Bancshares/Chemical Bank in Houston. "That's nearly 50 percent more than exist today. "Ten years ago, I said banking was the last industry I would want to be a part of," Hawk said. "Today, I wouldn't want to be anywhere else."

Hawk's address, "The Exciting Opportunities in Banking Today, preceded a panel discussion with Chuck Simpson of MBank in Austin; Charlotte Marvin of NCNB Texas

National Bank in Austin; Nancy pand, so do opportunities.' Vandiver of First Interstate Bank in Houston; and Mervin Peters of First City Bank of Bryan. Topics ranged from getting a good first job to perspectives of 25 years in banking. Hawk said the next few years look ood for those entering the banking

'Organizations which are growing rapidly or industries that are undergoing substantial change offer the best opportunities for jobs. "When you add this to the vibrancy of the Texas economy, exciting opportunities exist because you will be getting in on the ground floor of the next boom." Vandiver agrees. "Banking has changed a lot recently, especially in adapting to accommodate a more informed customer. Adaptation means expansion, and as services ex-
