actions, the penalties imposed on the University's football program would have been more severe."

Mobley testified before the committee Aug. 13 in Syracuse, N.Y.

In his testimony, he set out several points designed to "clean up" A&M's athletic program, including the establishment of an intercollegiate athletic compliance director, communication with former students on the school's intent to dissociate them from the athletic program following NCAA recruiting violations and disciplinary actions against athletic department staff involved in the violations.

Thirty-one allegations of rules violations and seven procedural violations were cited in the original letter from the NCAA.

Nine of these were dropped at the hearing in Syracuse and four were self-reported.

Eight of the charges were not addressed in the letter. The two unnamed assistant coaches found in violation of NCAA rules will have their contracts reviewed at the end of the season, and Sherrill has been placed on "administrative probation."

Mobley said that in effect, he also is on administrative probation but would not say that either would leave automatically for any violation.

Sherrill was more definitive than Mobley on the possibility of dismissal.

"If Jackie Sherrill does something to warrant it, Jackie Sherrill will leave this institution," he said.

"Dr. Mobley won't have to fire Jackie Sherrill."

Mobley said the main point of administrative probation is to help regain institutional control, which rests with the athletic director and the president.

Several reports now will be filed through Robert Smith, vice president for finance and operations, and Smith has been made an ex-officio member of the Athletic Council.
