College Bowl taking entries until Sept. 23

By Holly Becka
Staff Writer

Sharpen your wits, it's time again for College Bowl and this could be your big chance to show off how educated you are.

College Bowl, an MSC project, is looking for teams or people interested in joining the campus-wide competition Sept. 29 through Nov. 17. Winners of Texas A&M's competition will advance to a regional contest, with a chance to go on to nationals.

"College Bowl will be an inter-mural (event) this year with teams from A&M competing," said John Monroe, College Bowl public relations vice-chairman. "There will be four people on a team competing in two 10-minute halves in a double elimination tournament.

"Usually, we use a 40-team bracket system. There are several teams signed up now. If we get more than 40 signed up, we'll be happy to take them," he said.

Monroe, a junior anthropology major, said many clubs organize College Bowl teams. He said he expects strong participation from campus organizations again this year.

The teams will be quizzed on random trivia questions.

"They'll be asked information about almost anything - state capitals and presidents to math problems and sports trivia."

Monroe said there is no definitive way participants can study for the competition.

"Some practice by getting together and playing trivial pursuit, other teams do well by not studying, and there are trivia books you could read," he said.

Those interested in joining a team should go by the College Bowl office in the Student Programs Office in 212 MSC before Sept. 23.

Entry fees are $5 per person or $20 per team.

Cisneros' decision to retire no surprise to supporters

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Mayor Henry Cisneros' decision to leave politics didn't surprise his supporters or opponents, who said he paved the way for the city's growth, but it was time for him to leave.

The 41-year-old Cisneros, the first Hispanic mayor of a major U.S. city, announced Monday that he would not seek a fifth term next spring. However, he would not rule out a run at a political office in the future.

The mayor said the 14 years he served the city — eight as mayor and six as a councilman — were enough and he had to think of his family's financial future because the mayor's salary pays less than $5,000.

The announcement did not surprise many of Cisneros' friends or foes.

"I genuinely believe that Henry Cisneros' dream is to provide his children with the same educational fulfillment that he has gained," said Ruben Bonilla, a Corpus Christi attorney and friend of Cisneros.

"I think it's a legitimate concern, but I think the removal is only temporary and once his children's educational foundation is secure, Henry Cisneros will be young enough and capable enough to serve anywhere he chooses to serve," he said.

For nearly a year, Cisneros frequently has been asked if he would serve a fifth term after he undertook two controversial proposals — a $160 million domed stadium and a regional water plan — and said he would not seek higher office until those projects were on their way.

"I hope it's been good for San Antonio and I hope it's been (good) for each one of you personally. I know it has been good for me. But, like the old saying goes, all good things must end. I've made a decision. It's time to move along."

— San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros

The health of his son, John Paul Anthony, who was born with a congenital heart defect in June 1987, also played a role in Cisneros turning down an offer to address the Democratic National Convention and in curtailing his nationwide speaking engagements that supplemented his mayoral salary.

Cisneros also has two daughters nearing college age and has said he wants to provide for their education. At a news conference where he announced his decision, Cisneros outlined his tenure, which included welcoming heads of state, attracting new industries to the city and fighting with tax opponent C.A. Stubbs.

"I hope it's been good for San Antonio and I hope it's been good for each one of you personally," Cisneros said. "But, like the old saying goes, all good things must end. I've made a decision. It's time to move along."

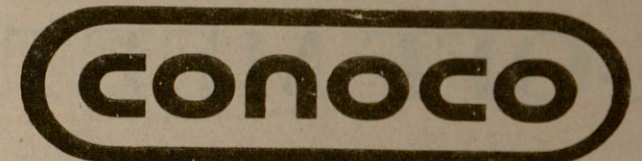

The mayor's decision did not surprise Stubbs, who fought Cisneros on a spending cap issue and a pension issue and said the mayor's decision was a relief to the middle class.

Cisneros said he frequently offers to join private industry, but he said he has made no definite plans about his future. He said he would like to get the stadium proposal passed.

While some political observers said Cisneros would return to politics, several councilmembers and Cisneros' supporters are poised to take his place as head of the nation's ninth largest city.

Councilman Nelson Wolff, a former state legislator, has said he would like to run for mayor. Mayor Lila Cockrell might return.

"I will have to say very clearly that there have been many persons who have asked me about this," Ms. Cockrell said. "I have been so single-mindedly hoping that he would see clear to being a candidate for another term, I have not given my full attention."
