

Dear Readers:

The end of the semester is still months away, and you probably think you will never graduate. But these four (or five) years you spend at A&M will not last forever. Before you know it, the big day will be here. Will you be ready?

This week At Ease focuses on how to make the most of college and the opportunities available while you are at A&M. Our main story looks at several important aspects of getting a job, including writing a resume and preparing for interviews. We talked to some of the top recruiters at major businesses to find out what they expect, such as grades and extracurricular involvement, from college graduates. A&M offers classes and has counselors available to help you sell yourself.

For the underclassmen who aren't ready to interview, our next story will be helpful. We talked to counselors who help students choose the right classes and majors. Why wait until your senior year when you have no more electives left to find out that you could have taken fun classes in food toxicology or meteorology?

Next we looked at the job opportunities available for liberal arts majors. Do they have no choice but to teach or go on to graduate school? Read on and see.

If you are thinking about graduate school, our next story should interest you. We found out about the advantages of staying in school, and even learned about ways to finance it.

This week's profile is about a student who changed majors just months before graduation. After he got his new degree he went on to work in his new field. Half a year later he decided to return to school and finish his first degree. Find out why he did this.

We haven't gotten many Attention!! submissions this week. If we don't start getting some, we may have to discontinue the page. Since it's a great way to get your works published, we know you don't want that to happen. Please come by 216 Reed McDonald and turn in those creative stories, photographs or artwork.

Building a resume _____ 8

The key to getting good work, it seems, is work. That work begins in college, but it means more than keeping your nose in your books. GPRs aren't the only things employers look at when they hire.

Eenie, meenie, minie, moe ... _____ 10

Stop whining. Picking a major isn't the end of the world. But it is important, so take advantage of the resources A&M provides to make the decision easier.

Have liberal arts degree ... now what? _____ 7

Liberal arts majors are growing at A&M, but what does one do with a bachelor's of history or English? Job opportunities do exist for those who'd rather not go on to graduate school.

When a bachelor's isn't enough _____ 11

Students go to graduate school to improve their employment opportunities, to do research and to fulfill goals. And, would you believe, some even go to graduate school to postpone getting a job.

Career Profile _____ 6

Graduation is only a semester away when you realize, with horror, you really don't like your major after all. Are you doomed to a job you don't want? A life you can't enjoy? Our profile subject this week found himself in a similar situation — twice.

Live Music _____ 5

Shane found a D.A. and Texas Party show to have something for everyone — Broadway, blues and nostalgic rock.

Album Review _____ 4

Greek musician Yanni has broken new ground with new age music in his new album, "Chameleon Days," Shane says.

Movie Review _____ 4

Shane says "Moon Over Parador" is a good movie about acting under pressure.
