3 Aggies bear pain for Ironman

By Ashley Glennon
Reporter

Unless you are a triathlete, the thought of biking 120 miles a week, running another 30 and swimming five more would seem like cruel physical punishment.

Perhaps it is, but to three Texas A&M students who have pushed their bodies to the limit for the past year, their efforts have turned to gold—or, perhaps iron.

Tim Tetsch, Angie Darby and Bob Talamini qualified earlier this month to compete in the Ironman Triathlon World Championship, to be held in Kona, Hawaii, after completing the Texas Hill Country Triathlon, Long Course National Championship, at Canyon Lake near San Antonio.

"The Ironman is the most prestigious race in the world," says Tetsch, a senior management major from Farmers Branch and treasurer of the Texas A&M Triathlon Club. "I was both ecstatic and relieved that I qualified. I reached my goal."

Tetsch has been gearing up for the Texas Hill Country Triathlon since last spring. "I've been riding 100 to 150 miles, running about 15 miles, and swimming five to six miles each week," Tetsch says, "but now I'm going to up my riding to at least 200, and my running to 20 miles or more."

Darby, a senior speech communications major from Conroe and president of the triathlon club, entered the Hill Country Triathlon with a different frame of mind.

"I didn't think I had a chance," Darby said. "I didn't even know I was going to do the race until right up to the deadline. I entered this race on a fluke."

Unlike Tetsch who has been training hard for a year, Darby stepped up her ongoing training only four weeks before the race.

Darby rode 120 miles per week, ran 30, and swam four and could not believe that she qualified.

"But now that I have, I can't wait. I'm fired up and ready to train."

For Talamini, a senior physical education major from Houston, the Ironman qualification came easy. Talamini did not start a hard workout until the Monday before the race.

"I didn't have time to work out more," Talamini said.

Talamini's usual workout consists of a six to 10-mile run every other day, a 150-mile per week bike ride, and a four to six mile swim, he said.

The Texas Hill Country Triathlon consists of a 1.5-mile lake swim, a 48-mile bike through rolling hills, and a 10-mile run.

"It was a tortuous, grueling run," Tetsch said, "and the first 18 miles of the bike course was quite a challenge too. The hills were really long."

Tetsch pointed out that the heat was the hardest factor to overcome in this race.

"The medical tent was full, let's put it that way," Tetsch said.

The Ironman Triathlon World Championship will celebrate its 10th anniversary race October 22. The Ironman consists of a 2.4-mile ocean swim, a 112-mile bike race and a 26.2-mile run, all of which must be completed within 17 hours of the 7 a.m. start time.

"The race is going to cost us about $1,500 each," Talamini said. "Hopefully we will be able to raise some money through sponsorships to help us go."

Darby and Tetsch are trying to obtain more from the University, they said.

Hershiser wins despite early adversity

HOUSTON (AP) — Orel Hershiser was cut from his high school and college baseball teams.

But spare any pity.

After four straight shutouts, Hershiser is now nearing the head of the major league class in scoreless innings pitched.

The Los Angeles Dodgers right-hander pitched his fourth shutout in a row Monday night, allowing four hits in leading the Dodgers to a 1-0 victory over Houston. That gave him 40 consecutive scoreless innings, 18½ innings short of the major-league record set in 1968 by former Dodger Don Drysdale.

Hershiser couldn't make the team in his first tries at high in Cherry Hill, N.J. and at Bowling Green University. He subsequently became an all-star both there and in the National League.

But he's never pitched as well as this year, even when he was 19-3 in 1985. The win Monday made him 22-8 this season.

"This is like a dream come true for me," said Hershiser, who credits Manager Tommy Lasorda's patience with his development.

"Tommy stayed with me when I came up my first year. He instilled confidence in me."

Hershiser could beat Drysdale's record with two more starts but he'd need to go an extra inning. He doesn't believe it will happen.

"Two more shutouts will be tough," Hershiser said. "I don't think it can be done. I haven't talked to Drysdale about the record. If I throw another shutout, I'll have lunch with him."

Drysdale, now a Dodgers broadcaster, says he's watched Hershiser with admiration but has avoided the subject of the streak.

"I haven't talked to him about it, I don't want to jinx anybody," Drysdale said. "He's doing things very well on his own."

Drysdale pitched six consecutive shutouts en route to his major league record.

"Orel's just been in complete control of his pitches," Drysdale said. "He's in such a groove. He's worked so hard, you just like to see him do well."

Drysdale sees some similarities to his streak.

"You just feel in a total groove, it's really amazing," he said. "Plus the guys behind you have to make the plays. That's been happening for Orel."

Dodgers hand Astros 6th straight defeat 6-0

HOUSTON (AP) — Tim Belcher scattered six hits Tuesday night as Los Angeles beat the Houston Astros 6-0 for the Dodgers' third straight shutout, reducing their magic number to four.

The Dodgers blanked Cincinnati on Sunday and Orel Hershiser pitched his fourth straight shutout to beat the Astros 1-0 on Monday night.

It was the Dodgers' ninth victory in 10 games as they neared the National League West Division title. It was the Astros' sixth straight loss.

Belcher, 11-5, continued Houston's scoring drought. He struck out five batters and didn't walk any.

The closest Houston came to scoring was in the third inning when rookie Cameron Drew singled, went to second base on Rafael Ramirez's single and was sacrificed to third.

The Dodgers pounded Houston starter Bob Forsch for 10 hits in five runs over the first five innings.

Steve Sax singled, stole second base, went to third on a groundout and scored the first run on Forsch's wild pitch in the first inning.

The Dodgers added a run in the second when Franklin Stubbs doubled, went to third on a fly ball scored on Rick Dempsey's single left field.

Dempsey scored the third run in the fourth inning. He singled to center field, went to second on stop Rafael Ramirez's throwing error and scored on Alfredo Griffin's single to right field.

Kirk Gibson and Mike Marshall hit consecutive singles to start the fifth and scored on sacrifice fly John Shelby and Stubbs.

Stubbs hit his seventh home run of the season in the eighth off Belcher. Meyer to cap the scoring.
