

Rudolf Nureyev will dance just a few places in America this year.

One of them is right here.

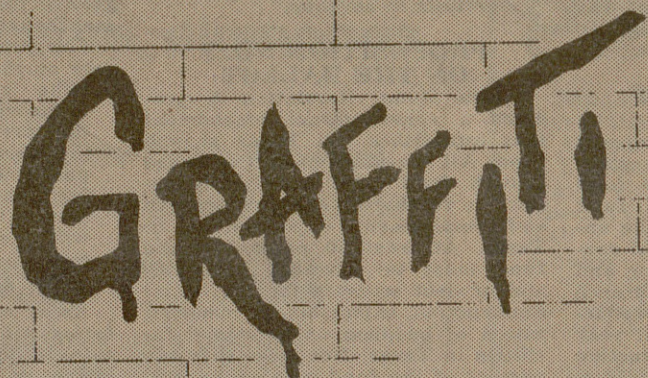

Rudolf Nureyev is one of the greatest, and certainly most famous ballet dancers of all time. Since his world-rocking "leap to freedom" from the Soviet Union in 1961, he has electrified the world of dance. He has danced with all the world's great companies, including the Paris Opera Ballet, which he now directs.

MSC OPAS 16 will present Rudolf Nureyev and Friends, the Paris Opera Ballet, as just one of the seven great performances on this season's Music Series. In addition to his performance here, he will host an informal reception after the MSC OPAS performance.

Only OPAS 16 season ticket holders will be guaranteed tickets to this sure sell-out. Don't wait for single tickets and miss this rare opportunity. OPAS 16 season tickets are now on sale for the Music Series, and for the Theater Series, which will bring six hit Broadway performances including 'My One, and Only' and 'A View From The Bridge'. Order yours today.

Tickets on sale at the MSC Box Office, Rudder Center, Credit card order by phone 845-1234.

OPAS 16 Single tickets go on sale October 3rd.
 This season we bring you the world.

5 die in blaze as firefighters cut iron bars

DALLAS (AP) — Three children and two teen-agers, huddled together in one room, died in a blaze Wednesday as firefighters struggled to cut through iron burglar bars to free them.

Another child was in critical condition with burns, officials said.

"At this time, the cause is still under investigation," Dallas Fire Department investigator Raymond Lee said.

Lee said a gasoline can was found in the house. "All we know at this point is that it was bought to mow the yard," he said.

Beverly Handy, a field agent with the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office, identified the victims as: Jasmine Jordan, 1, Ericka Jordan, 9, Jamal Jordan, 6, Bernard Jordan, 16, Demetra Jordan, 18.

Causes of the deaths had not been determined, Handy said.

Parkland Memorial Hospital spokesman Tom Geddie said Kertrick Jordan, 10, was in critical condition with burns over about half of his body. A blood drive had been started for him at the hospital, officials said.

Officials said the children all lived with their grandmother, 52-year-old Molly Jordan, who was working at the Dallas Veterans Administration Medical Center when the fire began.

She was called to the scene by fire officials and later was hospitalized with shock.

The children were found gathered in one bedroom, suggesting they were aware of the fire, officials said. Fire officials found the oldest boy, Bernard, huddled over two of the younger children — apparently trying to protect them — on the floor between two twin beds.

"Just guessing, I'd say it took at least five minutes longer getting in (because of the bars)," Investigator Doug Preston said. "It could have been longer. A few minutes can be the difference between life and death."

The fire department received the call at 4:09 a.m. and arrived with two vehicles, including a bar-cutting saw, at 4:12 a.m., Preston said.

Fire investigator Don Howard said firefighters were also hampered by a love seat pushed against the house door.

It was not the first time burglar bars have slowed fire rescue or escape efforts in the city.

Shortly after four women and three children died in January 1986 in a house protected by barred windows and doors, the Dallas City Council changed the building code requiring the bars be able to open on hinges from the inside.

The law wasn't retroactive. In August 1987, two separate fires in which bars were on the windows claimed the lives of three people.

"The newer Dallas code requires that the bars be able to open from the inside," Preston said. "These were the older ones. They can't be pulled off. They're usually bolted through the walls."
